Biden’s decision to drop out leaves Democrats across the country relieved and looking toward future

By JOEY CAPPELLETTI, MIKE HOUSEHOLDER and CHARLOTTE KRAMON Associated Press

HARPER WOODS, Mich., Jul 22, 2024 (AP): After weeks of uncertainty about who would be at the top of the Democratic Party’s ticket in November, many voters expressed relief over the news that President Joe Biden would drop his reelection bid and began to think about who might replace him in a dramatically altered election landscape.

Jerod Keene, a 40-year-old athletic trainer from swing-state Arizona, had planned to vote for Biden in November but was thankful for the president’s decision, calling it “inevitable.” Keene said he’s excited about the next candidate, hoping it will be Vice President Kamala Harris, whom Biden endorsed on Sunday.

“Kamala Harris is the easiest pick based on the fact that she’s vice president and it would be tough for the party to try to go a different direction on that,” said Keene, who lives in Tucson. “And I think she seems ready.”

The Democratic Party has been deeply divided since Biden’s poor debate performance on June 27, which left many questioning his ability to defeat Republican Donald Trump in November and secure another term. Party leaders had increasingly called for Biden to step aside, but his reluctance to bow out left voters nationwide uncertain about who would face Trump in November.

Recent AP-NORC polling revealed that nearly two-thirds of Democrats felt Biden should withdraw from the presidential race, while a majority believe Harris would perform well in the top slot.

Keene’s relief that the saga surrounding Biden’s decision was over was echoed by voters nationwide. In key swing states such as Wisconsin, Arizona, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Georgia, and Nevada, many expressed optimism about the party’s next nominee.

In Pittsburgh, Fred Johnston said he has been terrified of another Trump presidency and had long worried that Biden couldn’t beat Trump again. After seeing Biden’s wobbly debate performance, he was eager for Biden to drop out and hand off his candidacy to Harris.

“Kamala is someone we can vote for, and that’s what we need,” Johnston said.

He also thinks she can win Pennsylvania: “I have no logical basis for this, but it’s good to have hope. I haven’t had hope for a while.”

In Las Vegas, Lucy Ouano, 68, said she was proud of both Biden’s decision to drop out of the race and his move to quickly endorse Harris.

“He’s ending on a great note,” Ouano said. “Trump should be worried. He’s now running against someone strong.”

Ouano, who emigrated in 1960 to the U.S. from Thailand as a young child with her parents, said she couldn’t have imagined this outcome just a few weeks ago when she attended a Harris rally in Las Vegas meant to quiet concerns about Biden’s reelection campaign.

“She’s going to get the Asians drummed up, and she’s going to get the women drummed up.”

Picturing the Border exhibition opens at CMA

Photographs from the 1970s through the present day tell a story through the lenses of border residents and Latinx, Chicano/a, and Mexican photographers

CLEVELAND, July 18, 2024: Featuring more than four dozen photographs, Picturing the Border aims to spark vital conversations of what constitutes citizenship, as well as complex negotiations of personal identity as it relates to the border. Through these images the exhibition shows that Latinx, Chicano/a, and Mexican photographers have significantly rethought what defines citizenship, nationality, family, migration, and the border beyond traditional frameworks for decades.

Opening on July 21, 2024, in the Mark Schwartz and Bettina Katz Photography Gallery, this free exhibition will be on view through January 5, 2025. From intimate domestic portraits, narratives of migration, and political demonstrations to images of border crossings and clashes between migrants and the US Border Patrol, this one-of-a-kind exhibition presents photographs taken by both border residents and outsiders, many of whom are Latinx, Chicano/a, and Mexican, and tells the story of the US-Mexico borderlands from the 1970s to the present.

“Borders have long been spaces of contention,” says Nadiah Rivera Fella, curator of contemporary art. “The mainstream media in the United States tends to present nationalistic narratives about imminent threats at the border. This reductive and divisive narrative does not often portray the identities, languages, cultures, and social ties among communities. The photographs featured in this exhibition tell a different story that can serve as a counternarrative and timely new perspective on life in this region.”

The earliest images in Picturing the Border form an origin story for the topicality of the US-Mexico border at present and demonstrate that the issues of the border have been a critical point of inquiry for artists since the 1970s. In addition, they showcase artists who were ahead of their time in presenting ideas about spaces and exclusion as they relate to issues of the borderlands and Latinx identities in the United States.

Exhibition Catalogue

A beautifully illustrated 134-page exhibition catalogue accompanies Picturing the Border by Nadiah Rivera Fella, curator of contemporary art, with contributions from Natalie Scenters-Zapico.

The US-Mexico border has undergone dramatic changes over the past six decades, becoming increasingly industrialized, urbanized, and militarized, especially in the aftermath of 9/11 and the War on Terror. Mainstream and conservative news coverage has often reinforced or exacerbated such developments, characterizing the border as out of control and describing migrants in derogatory terms, in the process fueling xenophobic sentiment.

A foil to this reductive and dehumanizing narrative, this presentation of Latinx photography offers more nuanced portrayals of life in the borderlands. Ranging from the 1970s to the 2020s, images by Louis Carlos Bernal, Graciela Iturbide, and Laura Aguilar, as well as emerging artists such as

Ada Trillo, Guadalupe Rosales, and Miguel Fernández de Castro display alternative photographic vocabularies regarding place, identity, and race. With subject matter spanning from intimate domestic portraits and youth counterculture to border crossings and clashes involving the US Border Patrol, this richly illustrated volume also features scholarly essays and new work by fronteriza poet Natalie Scenters-Zapico, providing new insights on this fraught and misunderstood region.

After crash that killed 6 teens, NTSB chief says people underestimate marijuana's impact on drivers

By TOM KRISHER AP Auto Writer

DETROIT, Jul 18, 2024 (AP): A horrific crash that killed six high school girls in Oklahoma two years ago has the head of the U.S. National Transportation Safety Board urging parents to warn teenagers about the risk of driving after using marijuana.

Chairwoman Jennifer Homendy made the appeal to parents Thursday as her agency released the final report on the March 22, 2022 collision between a tiny Chevrolet Spark hatchback and a gravel-hauling semi in the small town of Tishomingo.

The board, after an investigation by its staff, determined that the crash was caused by the 16-year-old driver slowing for an intersection, then accelerating through a stop sign because she likely was impaired by recent marijuana use and was distracted by having five teen passengers in the car, the NTSB report said.

In an interview, Homendy also said the cannabis problem isn't limited to teens. As more states have legalized recreational marijuana, teens and adults tend to underestimate the risks of driving under its influence.

"There's a perception that in states where it's legal that it's safe and legal to drive impaired on marijuana," she said.

In its report on the crash, the NTSB cited studies showing that marijuana decreases motor coordination, slows reaction time and impairs judgment of time and distance, all critical functions for driving.

Currently it's legal for people 21 and older to use marijuana recreationally in 24 states plus Washington, D.C., according to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety. Oklahoma doesn't allow recreational use, but like most states, it's legal for medical purposes. Driving while impaired by marijuana is illegal in all states and Washington, D.C.

The NTSB, which investigates transportation-related crashes but has no regulatory power, put out a safety alert Thursday urging parents to talk to young drivers about how marijuana can impair driving, and how they can make responsible choices to avoid driving while impaired or riding with impaired drivers.

Homendy said states that have legalized marijuana are behind in making sure people know that it's illegal to drive under its influence. Over half of Americans live in a state where recreational cannabis use is legal, she said.

"Unfortunately, I think state laws that are legalizing recreational and medicinal use of marijuana have really come before thoughts or action on what are they going to do about traffic safety," Homendy said. "They are far ahead on legalizing it, but very behind when it comes to traffic safety."

States, she said, need to collect more data on how legalizing marijuana has affected traffic safety, and they need to start enforcing laws against driving while impaired by cannabis.

"Enforcement has got to be there in order to deter," she said.

One study on crashes in Washington state, which has legalized recreational marijuana use, showed that more drivers involved in fatal crashes tested positive for marijuana after it became legal, the NTSB said.

In Tishomingo, about 100 miles (160 kilometers) southeast of Oklahoma City, six high school girls got into the car designed to carry four for a lunch break, the NTSB report said.

At an intersection, the driver slowed to 1 mile per hour (1.6 kilometers per hour), but accelerated and didn't come to a complete stop for a sign. Instead, she sped up and turned left in front of the gravel truck. The truck driver braked and steered to avoid the Spark, but hit the driver's side at just under 50 mph (80 kilometers per hour). All six teens died of multiple blunt force injuries.

Tests on blood taken from the driver's body found a THC concentration of 95.9 nanograms per milliliter, the NTSB said. If such a level of THC, the main chemical component of marijuana, were found in a living person, it would indicate "a high likelihood that the person had used cannabis very recently, and therefore was likely still experiencing acute impairing cannabis effects," the report said.

But the NTSB cautioned that body-cavity blood samples can sometimes be contaminated by other body fluids or by THC from other tissues, including the lungs, that may contain high concentrations.

In addition, the Oklahoma Highway Patrol found vaping mouthpieces and cannabis buds in the car at the scene of the crash, the report said.

The NTSB recommended in the report that the Oklahoma State Department of Education develop a drug and alcohol abuse curriculum for local school districts that tells students about the risk of cannabis-impaired driving. At present, only Massachusetts and Rhode Island have such course requirements, the NTSB said.

The agency also wants the Governors Highway Safety Association, a group of state highway safety officers, the National Conference of State Legislatures and the National Association of State Boards of Education to inform members about the need for cannabis information in school and driver education coursework.

The safety association said in a statement that cannabis-impaired driving is a growing safety concern, and state highway safety offices are focused on eliminating all impaired driving.

"We have to start communicating well ahead of time, to kids, that driving, having ingested or smoked or inhaled marijuana is impairing, and it's a risk to them and a risk to others," Homendy said.

EEU pide advertir a los adolescentes sobre los riesgos de conducir tras consumir marihuana

Por TOM KRISHER Associated Press

DETROIT, Jul 18, 2024 (AP): Un horrible accidente en el que murieron seis colegialas de Oklahoma hace dos años, llevó a las autoridades viales estadounidenses a instar a los padres a que adviertan a los adolescentes sobre los riesgos de conducir tras consumir marihuana.

La presidenta de la Junta Nacional de Seguridad en el Transporte (NTSB, por sus siglas en inglés), Jennifer Homendy, hizo el llamado a los padres el jueves, cuando su agencia publicó el informe final del choque, ocurrido el 22 de marzo de 2022, entre un pequeño auto Chevrolet Spark y un semirremolque que transportaba grava, en el pequeño poblado de Tishomingo.

Tras una investigación hecha por su personal, la junta determinó que el choque se debió a que la conductora, de 16 años, redujo la velocidad en una intersección y luego aceleró, pasando una señal de "alto" debido a que, probablemente, estaba afectada por el consumo reciente de marihuana y estaba distraída por el hecho de tener cinco pasajeras adolescentes en el auto, se lee en el informe de la NTSB.

En entrevista, Homendy dijo también que el problema con el cannabis no se limita a los adolescentes. Dado que más estados han legalizado el uso recreativo de la marihuana, adolescentes y adultos tienden a subestimar los riesgos de conducir bajo su influencia.

"Existe la percepción de que, en los estados donde es legal, resulta seguro y legal conducir bajo la influencia de la marihuana", dijo.

En su informe sobre el accidente, la NTSB menciona estudios que muestran que la marihuana reduce la coordinación motriz, retarda el tiempo de reacción y daña la percepción del tiempo y la distancia, todas las cuales son funciones críticas para conducir.

Actualmente, es legal que las personas de 21 años o más consuman marihuana de forma recreativa en 24 estados, además de Washington, D.C., de acuerdo con el Instituto de Seguros para la Seguridad en las Carreteras. Oklahoma no permite el uso recreativo pero, al igual que en la mayoría de los estados, es legal para fines médicos. Conducir bajo la influencia de la marihuana es ilegal en todos los estados y en Washington, D.C.

Kent State and Cleveland Clinic enter multiyear partnership to support student-athlete health and wellness

July 17, 2024: Kent State University and Cleveland Clinic have announced a multiyear partnership in which Cleveland Clinic becomes the official healthcare provider for Kent State Athletics.

Cleveland Clinic will serve as the medical services provider to support Kent State student-athlete health and wellness. It will provide a variety of multidisciplinary services, including physicians, athletic training, physical therapy, behavioral health services, sports performance services, medical scheduling and insurance processing.

"Our student-athletes deserve the best support possible for their health and fitness, and there is no better partner to deliver this support than Cleveland Clinic," Kent State President Todd Diacon said. "Cleveland Clinic has been an outstanding partner in support of our nursing and public health programs, Brain Health Research Institute, respiratory therapy students at our Ashtabula Campus, grant-funded research projects and much more. We look forward to continuing to grow this valuable partnership."

Kent State's relationship with Cleveland Clinic extends to its alumni. Cleveland Clinic employs more than 2,300 Kent State graduates. About half of the Kent State alumni who work for the internationally renowned healthcare system are graduates of the university's College of Nursing.

With this new partnership, Dr. Lutul Farrow, executive director of Cleveland Clinic Sports Medicine, will serve as the head team physician and Kent State Athletics' healthcare administrator. Farrow is a board-certified, fellowship-trained orthopaedic surgeon and has a Subspecialty Certification in sports medicine. He will head a group of team physicians that includes Dr. Sami Rifat, director of sport and exercise medicine at Cleveland Clinic, who holds a board certification in family medicine and a fellowship-trained Certification of Added Qualification in Sports Medicine. The team physician staff will also include four additional board-certified, fellowship-trained sports medicine specialists. These team physicians will provide care at all Kent State home sporting events, Mid-American Conference (MAC) championships hosted by Kent State as well as home and away football contests.

"Cleveland Clinic Sports Medicine is thrilled to partner with Kent State University as the official healthcare provider for their athletic programs," Farrow said. "Our goal is to deliver the highest level of care and support to their talented student-athletes, ensuring they can perform at their best while maintaining optimal health and wellness. This partnership allows us to extend our expertise and resources to an outstanding institution and its students."

Additionally, Cleveland Clinic will provide medical clinic hours for Kent State student-athletes throughout the year, allowing student-athletes access to team physicians outside of game day. Golden Flash students, student-athletes, faculty and employees will also have access to an on-site sports physical therapist throughout the year. Furthermore, a Cleveland Clinic-employed registered dietician will be available in a virtual or on-site capacity, ensuring that the student-athletes are fueling themselves properly all year long.

"We are elated to begin our partnership with Cleveland Clinic," Kent State's Vice President and Director of Intercollegiate Athletics Randle L. Richmond said. "In the ever-changing landscape of college athletics, one thing that remains paramount is the health and safety of our student-athletes. This partnership gives our student-athletes and our department access to world-renowned care and cutting-edge technology and facilities. The care that our student-athletes will receive from Cleveland Clinic is unrivaled across college athletics as we strive to graduate student-athletes who are boldly prepared for life after sport and to win championships."

The new partnership also grants easy access to scheduling to student-athletes for all imaging, emergency room and urgent care needs as well as specialties and subspecialties that fall beyond the scope of the team physicians. In addition, baseline concussion and concussion testing will be provided to student-athletes.

Beyond sports medicine, Cleveland Clinic will provide mental health services with access to a sports and performance psychologist to student-athletes. In addition, Cleveland Clinic will deliver continuing education to all Kent State athletic trainers and physicians. Faculty and staff training in CPR and professional rescue will be made available throughout the summer months during the partnership.

Kent State's Board of Trustees approved this latest partnership between the university and Cleveland Clinic during its May 2024 meeting. Cleveland Clinic began providing athletics medical services to the university on July 1, 2024.

Luis Grijalva va por una medalla a París para él, Guatemala y todos los ‘dreamers’

Por CARLOS RODRÍGUEZ

CIUDAD DE MÉXICO, Jul 19, 2024 (AP) — Hasta hace poco, para poder participar en competencias internacionales, Luis Grijalva dividía sus tiempos entre entrenamientos y trámites legales que estuvieron cerca de dejarlo fuera de los pasados Juegos Olímpicos. Todo eso es ya parte del pasado para el corredor guatemalteco.

Grijalva requería tramitar permisos para salir porque era parte del programa Acción Diferida para los Llegados en la Infancia (DACA, por sus siglas en inglés), una política migratoria de Estados Unidos que retrasa la deportación de personas en ese país.

El guatemalteco de 25 años arribó a Estados Unidos cuando tenía apenas 1 año. Pero desde hace unos meses, el competidor tiene un nuevo visado que ya le permite viajar sin restricciones. Llegará a los próximos Juegos Olímpicos como una de las sólidas esperanzas de medalla para su país natal.

“Con esta visa voy a poder salir cuando quiera y me cambia la vida, porque costaba mucho y perdía mucho tiempo para sacar los permisos”, dijo Grijalva a The Associated Press. “Hay que hablar con mucha gente, abogados, pero ahora ya puedo ir a Guatemala cuando quiera”.

El fondista ahora posee la visa O-1, que se reserva para personas con habilidades o logros extraordinarios en las ciencias, artes, educación, negocios o el deporte. Ese nuevo visado le ha permitido viajar a Europa para prepararse de cara los Juegos Olímpicos, donde buscará darle a Guatemala su segunda medalla olímpica después de la conquistada por Erick Barrondo, quien obtuvo una plata en 20 kilómetros de marcha en Londres 2012. Además, Grijalva llegará con la experiencia de haber participado en Tokio 2021 donde fue 12do en los 5.000 metros. Lo respaldan además dos cuartos lugares logrados en los Mundiales de Eugene, Oregon, en 2022, y de Budapest el año pasado. Gran parte de la oportunidad de competir en sus primeros olímpicos se debe al fotoperiodista Erick Aguilar, un entusiasta del atletismo latinoamericano.

Hace siete años, Aguilar acudió a ver en persona a Grijalva por primera vez y al ver el problema que tenía para participar en competencias internacionales decidió ayudarlo. “Yo tuve que manejar siete horas para verlo, era su última carrera y junto con mi esposa viajamos y ahí comenzó la relación”, dijo Aguilar a The Associated Press.

Aguilar contactó a la abogada Jessica Smith para ayudar a que Grijalva consiguiera los permisos que le permitieron ir a sus primeros Juegos Olímpicos. “Al ver el caso y su talento, la abogada se movió rápido y en semanas sacó el permiso, claro, con ayuda del Comité Olímpico de Guatemala, y logró el permiso para convertirse en el primer ‘dreamer’ en ir a unos Juegos”, dijo Aguilar, quien reside en Sacramento. La abogada logró un permiso para que Grijalva pudiera ir a competir y regresar a Estados Unidos para residir sin problemas, algo que siendo parte de DACA no hubiera podido hacer. “Para mí fue una gran experiencia ir a Tokio, fue la primera vez que salía de Estados Unidos y antes de eso sólo viví en Guatemala, fue como conocer un nuevo mundo”, dijo Grijalva, quien arribó a California en 2000.

El guatemalteco descubrió su pasión por atletismo desde pequeño. Comenzó a destacar tanto que decidió permanecer en Estados Unidos a los 13 años, cuando su madre y dos hermanos optaron por regresar a Guatemala.

Su talento lo llevó a conseguir una beca en la universidad de Northern Arizona donde corrió hasta el 2021 cuando logró la marca para ir a los Juegos Olímpicos de Tokio.

“La experiencia de Luis ha sido de aprendizaje. Desde preparatoria fue especial. El corre y se fija una meta y la logra”, agregó Aguilar. “Esos dos cuartos lugares en los Mundiales le han dado mucha experiencia y cada carrera es una lección”.

Gracias a su nueva condición migratoria, el fondista pudo viajar recientemente a Guatemala luego de 23 años de ausencia. El estar con su gente unos días le dio una motivación adicional para los Juegos.

“Quiero conocer a la gente de Guatemala, es mi país”, enfatizó. “Nací aquí, mi papá y mi mamá vivieron aquí, tenemos historia de mucha familia aquí. Mi familia es guatemalteca, yo quería correr para ellos, para mi familia y para toda Guatemala”.

El fondista de 24 años participará en el penúltimo día de París 2024, la cita olímpica que se disputará entre el 26 de julio y el 11 de agosto.

“Cada año me pongo más rápido, aún soy joven, y tengo más experiencia”, dijo el corredor. “En los Juegos Olímpicos quiero representar a Guatemala lo más alto que puedo, tal vez podemos hacer historia”.

Para él y para todos los “dreamers”.

Rico struggled with congestive heart failure over the past five years, but was determined to never a deadline. La Prensa and the Latino community were his passion. The last 12 months were a huge financial struggle for him, but he refused to give up on La Prensa and he was too proud to ask for help. TARTA SEEKS FEEDBACK ON UPCOMING FARE SYSTEM UPGRADE

The Toledo Area Regional Transit Authority (TARTA) has scheduled a series of public events to collect community feedback on the planned rollout of an account-based ticketing system. These events will include two in-person forums and two virtual feedback sessions. These forums will focus on the Title VI equity analyses surrounding the service changes. A virtual session will be recorded and posted on the TARTA website. Public meetings are scheduled for:

- Virtual meeting, Monday, August 19, 5-6 p.m., Register at tarta.com/publicmeetings
- In-person meeting, Tuesday, August 20, 6-7 p.m., Toledo Lucas County Public Library, Kent Branch, 3101 Collingwood Blvd., Toledo
