La app que ha sido “una salvación” para entrada legal de migrantes a EEUU podría desaparecer

Por ELLIOT SPAGAT Associated Press

TIJUANA, México, Jan 17, 2025 (AP): Una enfermera que huyó de Cuba en el mayor éxodo de la nación caribeña en más de seis décadas necesitaba un lugar donde quedarse en México mientras esperaba para entrar legalmente a Estados Unidos usando una aplicación gubernamental. Una mujer que había vivido toda su vida en el mismo barrio de Tijuana necesitaba a desesperadamente ayuda médica después de que el ataque de unos perros le causó heridas en las piernas.

Un conocido de ambas las juntas. La enfermera Karla Figueroedo se quedó con Martha Rosales durante tres días en octubre de 2023, esperando la cita fronteriza reservada a través de la aplicación CBP One y tratándole las mordeduras. Cuando Figueroedo partió hacia Estados Unidos, Rosales le dio permiso para dar su nombre a otros migrantes.

La voz se corrió rápidamente y Rosales incluyó su hogar en un listado con al menos tres docenas de alojamientos para migrantes en su ciudad natal en la frontera entre Estados Unidos y México, donde aloja temporalmente a usuarios de la app CBP One.

Rosales, de 45 años, había sido atacada por cinco perros y, hasta que Figueroedo la trató, utilizaba silla de ruedas. Contó que le pidió a Dios que, si no le amputaban los pies, ayudaría a cada cubano que pudiese.

CBP One ha facilitado la entrada de casi un millón de personas a Estados Unidos con permisos de dos años que dan opción a trabajar en el país, pero podría desaparecer una vez que el presidente electo Donald Trump asuma el cargo.

Figueroedo, de 25 años, trabaja ahora como auxiliar médico en la zona de Houston y mantiene contacto con Rosales, quien dejó su empleo como limpiadora en un banco para concentrarse en su refugio para migrantes. Las personas a las que aloja, en su mayoría cubanos, le llaman “Tía Martha” mientras ella prepara desayunos con panqueques, organiza fiestas de cumpleaños y los lleva a sus citas de CBP One.

Los defensores de la app CBP One sostienen que ha ayudado a poner orden en la frontera y reducido los cruces ilegales. Pero Trump ha dicho que la suprimirá como parte de una campaña antimigración más amplia. Los críticos apuntan que prioriza un sistema de lotería sobre las personas que llevan años viviendo en el país sin permisos mientras pagan impuestos y sobre quienes llevan años esperando una visa.

Dayron García, un médico de Cuba que se enteró de Rosales por un sobrino, se postuló con su esposa e hijos y planea establecerse con un amigo en Houston. Señaló que la casa de Rosales “se siente como familia” y que “CBP One ha sido una salvación”.

“Es una garantía”, manifestó García, de 40 años. “Entras con papeles, con libertad provisional”.

CBP One se estrenó con Trump y cambió con Biden

La Oficina de Aduanas y Protección Fronteriza de Estados Unidos (CBP, por sus siglas en inglés) puso en marcha CBP One cerca del final del primer mandato de Trump como una vía para que los agentes de aduanas programaran inspecciones y para que los visitantes con visas de corta estancia pudiesen ampliarlas.

El gobierno de Biden extendió su uso a los migrantes para reemplazar un opaco mosaico de exenciones a una prohibición de asilo relacionada con la pandemia que estaba en vigor.

CBP One es popular entre cubanos, venezolanos, haitianos y mexicanos, probablemente porque los activistas en sus comunidades lo promueven.

Los cruces fronterizos ilegales de cubanos se desplomaron con CBP One desde el pico de casi 35.000 de abril de 2022 a apenas 97 en septiembre.

La demanda de citas ha superado con creces la oferta, con un promedio de unas 280.000 personas compitiendo por 1.450 plazas diarias hacia finales del año pasado, según CBP. Los ganadores deben presentarse en un cruce fronterizo en el plazo de tres semanas.

Un ave nocturna

Ahora, los refugios para migrantes a lo largo de la frontera mexicano-estadounidense están ocupados principalmente por quienes solicitan las citas online.

La casa de Rosales está en un barrio con casas desvencijadas donde se apilan neumáticos viejos para frenar las inundaciones repentinas. Los migrantes ven la televisión, juegan al billar, hacen tareas y cuidan de sus hijos en la vivienda o en otra alquilada cerca.

Quienes no tienen cita aún emplean sus celulares para buscar los huecos que se habilitan a diario en ocho cruces fronterizos, una tarea comparable a tratar de comprar boletos para un concierto de Taylor Swift.

Rosales trabaja durante toda la noche. Un ayudante la lleva al aeropuerto en el vehículo que compró con la paga de jubilación de su trabajo en el banco.

Poco después de la medianoche, traslada a los invitados desde su casa al principal cruce fronterizo de Tijuana con San Diego para las primeras citas del día, a las 5 de la mañana. Charla con ellos, sonríe para las fotos y los abraza al despacharse.

A las tres de la madrugada está ya en un canal de televisión para hacer un turno de cuatro horas limpiando la redacción y servir café a los periodistas, que le dan la información más reciente sobre inmigración y la ciudad.

Revisa su celular buscando migrantes que necesiten refugio y que se hayan enterado de su existencia en redes sociales o por amigos y familiares.

En su lista de contactos los identifica por tamaño del grupo y fecha de la cita: “3 el 16” o “6 el 17”.

Rosales, una de 13 hermanas, dejó la escuela en tercer grado. La lectura de la Biblia le enseñó lo suficiente como para entender a duras penas los mensajes de texto, a los que suele responder con notas de voz o llamadas.

Enrique Lucero era el responsable de asuntos migratorios en Tijuana cuando Rosales acudió al ayuntamiento en busca de asesoramiento. Le ayudó a establecer una entidad legal para recaudar fondos y se puso a su disposición para emergencias, como cuando una mujer perdió su cita de CBP One por dar a luz. Lucero habló con la agencia para asegurarse de que la mujer y su bebé pasaran.

El éxodo de Cuba

Las detenciones fronterizas de cubanos aumentaron durante la pandemia del COVID-19 y tras las protestas antigubernamentales en 2021. Nicaragua acababa de aliviar las reglas para los vuelos desde La Habana, lo que les permitía evitar tener que cruzar a pie el Tapón del Darién, una peligrosa selva en Colombia y Panamá. En la primavera de 2022, los cubanos superaron a todas las nacionalidades —excepto a los mexicanos— en cruces ilegales.

Para Yoandis Delgado, la app fue un regalo de Dios. Voló a Nicaragua en 2023, pagó 1.000 dólares a un contrabandista para llegar al sur de México y fue robado repetidamente por autoridades mexicanas mientras intentaba llegar a la frontera norte.

Delgado, que era cocinero en Cuba, dijo que la casa y el vecindario de Rosales no llaman la atención de quienes quieren aprovecharse de los migrantes, lo que ofrece una sensación de seguridad que no dan los hoteles u otros refugios.

Un futuro sombrío para CBP One

Los funcionarios del gobierno de Biden presentan CBP One como un éxito clave en su estrategia para crear vías legales en la frontera y disuadir de los cruces ilegales. Señalan que las personas en situación de riesgo pueden acudir a un cruce fronterizo sin cita para presentar su caso.

La ansiedad va en aumento entre los migrantes en México, que temen que Trump cancele CBP One. Los que ya están en Estados Unidos también están inquietos porque el permiso expira en dos años.

El equipo de transición de Trump no respondió a preguntas sobre el futuro de la app, pero sus aliados dicen que es demasiado generosa y fomenta la inmigración. Un proyecto de ley que se estancó en el Senado en 2023 habría prohibido usar la aplicación para admitir la entrada de migrantes.

Figueroedo, la enfermera que ayudó a Rosales, planea obtener el permiso de residencia permanente, conocida como “green card”, en virtud de una ley de 1966 que se aplica a los cubanos. Dice que ella y su pareja, que es barbero, emigraron al país para seguir creciendo profesionalmente y criar a sus hijos en el futuro.

México examina con 9 países latinoamericanos acciones conjuntas ante posibles deportaciones de EEUU

CIUDAD DE MÉXICO, Jan 16, 2025 (AP): Ministros y representantes de México y nueve países de Latinoamérica y el Caribe iniciaron el jueves un encuentro de dos días en la capital mexicana para definir acciones conjuntas ante las posibles deportaciones masivas que podría implementar Donald Trump, que asumirá la presidencia de Estados Unidos la próxima semana.

A la reunión promovida por el gobierno mexicano asistieron representantes de Belice, Brasil, Colombia, Cuba, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haití, Honduras y Venezuela, informó la Secretaría de Relaciones Exteriores de México en un comunicado.

La mayor parte de los migrantes que atraviesan el territorio mexicano en su ruta hacia Estados Unidos provienen de Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, Venezuela, Colombia, Nicaragua, Cuba y Haití, entre otros.

Durante el encuentro se prevé coordinar acciones con el fin de proteger los derechos humanos de los migrantes, prevenir abusos y malos tratos, y reforzar la cooperación internacional para atender el fenómeno migratorio desde sus causas, precisó la Cancillería mexicana.

La reunión fue propuesta este mes por la presidenta mexicana Claudia Sheinbaum, que planteó que debía realizarse un encuentro de los representantes de América Latina para examinar los retos que enfrenta la región en materia migratoria ante la llegada de Trump.

En octubre de 2023 se realizó en la ciudad mexicana de Palenque una cumbre de presidentes y representantes de los gobiernos de diez países de Latinoamérica y el Caribe, en la que se analizaron varias acciones para atender la migración.

Sheinbaum sostuvo el miércoles una conversación telefónica con su par de Guatemala, Bernardo Arévalo, con quien dialogó sobre cooperación bilateral. En entrevista con The Associated Press, Arévalo dijo que habló con su homólogo mexicano sobre el desarrollo económico de la frontera que comparten México y Guatemala con el fin de generar fuentes de trabajo para los migrantes, y la posibilidad de que los consulados mexicanos puedan atender a guatemaltecos que tengan algún tipo de problema migratorio.

El presidente guatemalteco descartó que haya una propuesta para que su país se convierta en un destino de recepción de migrantes de otros países, como ya acordó Trump con Guatemala en su primer mandato.

El gobierno de Sheinbaum está preparando una serie de acciones para atender a los mexicanos que puedan ser deportados.

Dentro de las medidas preventivas, las autoridades tienen previsto activar este mes una aplicación especial que funcionará como un "botón de alerta" y les permitirá a los mexicanos enviar una señal a sus familiares y al consulado cuando estén ante una detención inminente.

México también tendrá en sus consulados en Estados Unidos unos 2,610 abogados y asistentes para atender a sus connacionales.

En diciembre, Sheinbaum dijo que su gobierno estaba abierto a la posibilidad de aceptar a migrantes no mexicanos que puedan ser deportados por Estados Unidos, aunque con ciertas condiciones, entre las que podría estar el aceptar sólo a d e t e r m i n a d a s nacionales, o recibir a cambio apoyo económico para devolverlos desde México a sus países.

La mandataria ha exhortado a Washington a que realice las repatriaciones de los migrantes a sus países de origen.

El gobierno del expresidente Andrés Manuel López Obrador (2018-2024) llegó a un acuerdo con Estados Unidos en 2023 para recibir hasta unos 30.000 cubanos, haitianos, nicaragüenses y venezolanos repatriados por mes luego de que el m a n d a t a r i o estadounidense Joe Biden puso en vigor una normativa que endureció los requisitos para obtener asilo.

La migración ha sido durante mucho tiempo un tema delicado entre Estados Unidos y México, y se ha vuelto aún más urgente tras la amenaza de Trump de imponer aranceles de 25% a los productos mexicanos, a menos de que el país haga más para detener el flujo de migrantes y drogas.

Detroit sees a drop in homicides and violent crime, according to preliminary 2024 data

By COREY WILLIAMS Associated Press

DETROIT, Jan 3, 2025 (AP): Homicides in Detroit have dropped to levels not seen since before the mid-1960s, according to preliminary year-end statistics released Friday by the city.

The city is part of a national trend of declining rates of overall violent crime across the U.S.

Detroit ended 2024 with about 203 homicides — down 49 from the year before and the fewest in the city since 188 were committed in 1965, Mayor Mike Duggan told reporters.

Nonfatal shootings, assaults, carjackings and other violent crime also continue to drop across the city.

"We have numbers that are nothing short of remarkable," Duggan said. "I was the (Wayne County) prosecutor in 2002 and I remember the Detroit police celebrating that we got under 400 homicides for the first time and they said, 'We never thought we'd see that number.' And a few years back I was the mayor and we got under 300 homicides."

Overall violent crime in the United States declined by an estimated 3% in 2023 from the year before, according to an FBI report released in September. Nationally, murders and non-negligent manslaughter dropped nearly 12%.

Detroit, which has a population of about 633,000 residents, reported 309 homicides in 2022. There also were 308 homicides in 2021. The city had 261 homicides in 2018, the fewest since 1966 when there were 214 homicides.

Nonfatal shootings in Detroit dropped from 804 in 2023 to 606 last year.

"The change in this community in just a few years has been very special," Duggan said of the fewer homicides and shootings. "These aren't numbers. These are real people, mostly young people in our community."

Decreases have been across the board. Carjackings dipped from 167 in 2023 to 142 last year. Sexual assaults also were down and 184 fewer robberies were reported last year compared to 2023. Burglaries, larcenies and motor vehicle theft also dropped.

Duggan credited the city's partnerships with other local and state law enforcement and federal agencies.

He also credited programs like ShotStoppers which provides federal funds to groups in Detroit working to cut down the numbers of homicides and shootings. Reductions of 83%, 73% and 61% in some of the city's most violent areas were reported last month.

ShotStoppers kicked off in 2023 and empowers activists and residents to use their own strategies to prevent violence. Those strategies include teaching young people to think critically, improving training opportunities for adults, drug prevention and blight removal.

Detroit also has been hiring more police officers, putting 340 more on city streets over the past two years.

Judge allows Immigrant Survivors' Lawsuit over U Visa delays to proceed

DETROIT, MI, January 13, 2025: A federal district court judge in Michigan has ruled that survivors of crime who are suing the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) for unreasonable delays in their U visa applications have enough standing to move forward in their lawsuit. The decision comes after the plaintiffs in the case, A.M.P. v. DHS (formally known as B.L.R. v. DHS), asked the court to reconsider its previous decision to dismiss the case.

The National Immigrant Justice Center (NIJC), Michigan Immigrant Rights Center (MIRC), and Winston & Strawn LLP filed the class-action lawsuit in 2023. The nine named plaintiffs are survivors who assisted law enforcement in criminal investigations, filed U visa applications more than three years ago, and are still waiting for U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) to make initial decisions, known as "bona fide determinations," which could provide them access to work authorization and protection from deportation while they wait in a years-long backlog for their visa applications to be fully considered.

"The main trauma that I have is that for some reason they could deport me, separate me from my family. My son is here and my wife is pregnant," said Felipe Emmanuel Dzib Cohuo in 2023, a plaintiff in the case who has waited more than three years for his application to be adjudicated. "I don't feel free to board an airplane or a train, or walk freely on the street without being worried and alert all the time that there might be an ICE [Immigration and Customs Enforcement] officer because that's my biggest fear."

The court had previously issued an erroneous decision last year granting a motion from DHS that sought to dismiss the case. The court's January 2 decision acknowledged and corrected its error, concluding that the court has the authority to consider whether it should compel DHS to address unreasonable delays in the bona fide determinations process.

"The court's ruling, which recognizes that survivors are harmed by delays in U visa processing, means that USCIS does not have carte blanche to sit on applications indefinitely," said Richard Caldarone, senior litigation attorney at NIJC. "The plaintiffs will now have an opportunity to show that it is unreasonable for the agency to take more than four years to provide relief that requires only minutes of staff time."

All of the plaintiffs have suffered severe harm from DHS's delays, often because they are unable to apply for work authorization until they receive a bona fide determination.

For example, lead plaintiff A.M.P. brought charges against an acquaintance who sexually assaulted her. A.M.P. applied for a U visa in October 2021 but has yet to receive a bona fide determination from USCIS — meaning that she cannot legally work and lacks a reliable way to transport her U.S. citizen son, who has eye cancer, to medical appointments.

"We look forward to litigating plaintiffs' claims on their merits and helping U visa applicants avoid needless delays in obtaining the benefits they deserve," said Winston & Strawn partner Kurt Mathas.

Immigrants in Michigan who have questions about their rights can call MIRC at (734) 239-6863.

Werner & Mieth (1792–1819), Spiral Chandelier for Jérôme Bonaparte. Cast, chased, and fire-gilded bronze (ormolu) and cut and polished glass, 1810–11. Height: 68 7/8 in. (175 cm); diameter: 39 3/4 in. (101 cm). Gift of Mrs. Henry Goldman, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Owen, Florence Scott Libbey, Angelo del Nero, and Bequest of Edward E. MacCrone, by exchange, 2014.33. On view in Gallery 31.

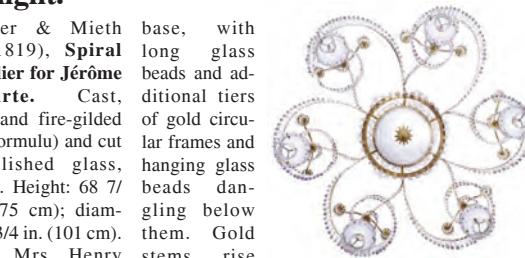

Image Description: A chandelier made of faceted pieces of glass hangs from a gold frame. The central element of the chandelier is a tube formed by two circles of gold with rows of beaded glass strung between them. Six gold spirals extend from its base, with long glass beads and additional tiers of gold circular frames and hanging glass beads dangling below them. Gold stems rise from each spiral, each supporting two small cups meant to hold candles. Six smaller gold spirals bearing long glass beads hang from the top of the chandelier.

Prussia. Napoleon's wife Josephine and other members of the Bonaparte family ordered numerous bronze and glass furnishings from Werner & Mieth.

This chandelier was purchased for the new summer palace of Jérôme Bonaparte, Napoleon's fashionable brother, who was King of Westphalia from 1807 to 1813. Werner & Mieth described this chandelier as the "most beautiful crown they can offer."

The design may be attributed to the archaeologist and theoretician Hans Christian Genelli (1763–1823) based on its relationship to a drawing in which he dissects the coiled shapes that top classical Ionic columns. Its form is based on a logarithmic spiral with a downward movement. The concept of an upside-down, hanging column is a remarkable one—the curling forms of the chandelier are particularly noticeable from below.

SpaceX pierde nave espacial tras atrapar propulsor en plataforma en vuelo de prueba de Starship

Por MARCIA DUNN Associated Press

Jan 16, 2025: SpaceX lanzó su cohete Starship en su vuelo de prueba más reciente el jueves, pero la nave espacial fue destruida después de una emocionante captura del propulsor de vuelta en la plataforma.

La compañía de Elon Musk indicó que los seis motores de la nave espacial parecían haberse apagado uno por uno, por lo que perdieron el contacto a los 8 minutos y medio del vuelo.

Se suponía que la nave espacial sobrevolaría el Golfo de México desde Texas en un recorrido casi circular alrededor del mundo similar a vuelos de prueba anteriores. SpaceX la había cargado con 10 satélites simulados para practicar su liberación. Fue el primer vuelo de esta nueva y mejorada nave espacial.

Un minuto antes, SpaceX utilizó los brazos mecánicos gigantes de la torre de lanzamiento para atrapar el propulsor que regresaba, una hazaña que sólo había logrado una vez. El propulsor descendente se mantuvo suspendido sobre la plataforma de lanzamiento y posteriormente fue tomado por el par de brazos apodados palillos.

La emoción de la captura se convirtió rápidamente en decepción no sólo para la compañía, sino también para las multitudes reunidas en el extremo sur de Texas.

"Fue genial ver desciender un propulsor, pero obviamente estamos decepcionados por la nave", dijo el portavoz de SpaceX, Dan Huot, agregando que tomaría tiempo analizar los datos y averiguar qué sucedió. "Es una prueba de vuelo. Es un vehículo experimental".

Los últimos datos recibidos de la nave espacial indicaron que alcanzó una altitud de 146 kilómetros (90 millas) y una velocidad de 21.317 kilómetros por hora (13.245 millas por hora).

El cohete de 123 metros (400 pies) había despegado a última hora de la tarde desde Boca Chica Beach cerca de la frontera con México. La hora tardía aseguró una entrada diurna a mitad de camino alrededor del mundo en el océano Índico. Pero la brillante nave espacial de aspecto retro nunca llegó tan lejos.

SpaceX había mejorado la nave espacial para la última demostración. Los satélites de prueba eran del mismo tamaño que los satélites de internet Starlink de SpaceX y, al igual que la nave espacial, estaban destinados a ser destruidos al entrar.

Musk planea lanzar Starlinks reales en Starships antes de pasar a otros satélites y, eventualmente, a tripulaciones.

Fue el séptimo vuelo de prueba para el cohete más grande y poderoso del mundo. La NASA ha reservado un par de Starships para aterrizar astronautas en la luna más adelante en esta década. El objetivo de Musk es Marte.

Horas antes en Florida, otra compañía de cohetes de un multimillonario — Blue Origin de Jeff Bezos — lanzó el cohete supersónico más nuevo, New Glenn. El cohete alcanzó la órbita en su primer vuelo, colocando con éxito un satélite experimental a miles de kilómetros sobre la Tierra. Pero el propulsor de la primera etapa fue destruido, perdiendo su aterrizaje objetivo en una plataforma flotante en el océano Atlántico.

Residentes afectados por incendios en el área de Los Ángeles no volverán a casa pronto

Por MICHAEL R. BLOOD y JAIME DING Associated Press

LOS ÁNGELES, Jan 16, 2025 (AP) — Ha pasado más de una semana desde que dos enormes incendios obligaron a decenas de miles de personas a huir de sus hogares en el área de Los Ángeles, y las autoridades dijeron el jueves que los residentes no volverán a casa pronto. Mientras continúa la búsqueda de restos humanos en los vecindarios arrasados, las propiedades también enfrentan nuevos peligros, ya que hay laderas quemadas que presentan riesgo de deslizamientos y escombros carbonizados cargados de asbestos y otras toxinas.

Más de 80.000 personas siguen bajo órdenes de evacuación, y muchas no saben qué queda de sus casas, apartamentos y posesiones, si es que aún hay algo. Decenas de personas se han reunido en puntos de control para suplicarle a la policía y a los soldados que restringen el acceso a sus vecindarios que los dejen ingresar.

Los funcionarios dijeron que entienden su frustración, pero pidieron paciencia a los residentes mientras equipos especializados en el manejo de materiales peligrosos y perros rastreadores de cadáveres revisan los sitios manzana por manzana. Indicaron que se requerirá una semana o más antes de que la gente pueda regresar.

"Las propiedades han sido dañadas más allá de lo creíble", dijo el director de Obras Públicas del condado Los Ángeles, Mark Pestrella, en una sesión informativa. "Están llenas de sedimentos, escombros, limo y materiales peligrosos".

Las laderas se han vuelto inestables detrás de algunas casas dañadas, y un pequeño deslizamiento de tierra en el vecindario Pacific Palisades esta semana arrojó escombros a las calles, agregó.

Mientras los bomberos aún combaten los dos incendios más grandes, que han dejado 27 muertos y más de 12.000 estructuras destruidas, miles de familias desconsoladas y propietarios de negocios arrasados comienzan a contemplar otra tarea monumental: reconstruir lo perdido.

La magnitud de las labores será enorme, ya que el área quemada por los incendios es de tres veces el tamaño de Manhattan. Es uno de los desastres naturales más destructivos en la historia del sur de California.

En reconocimiento de los riesgos para la salud en las áreas quemadas, el condado prohibió el jueves efectuar cualquier limpieza o remoción de escombros de incendios hasta que funcionarios gubernamentales completen una inspección de materiales peligrosos.

La ciudad también está trabajando para asegurar que el sistema de drenaje pluvial de la región no se obstruya cuando comience a llover de nuevo en las próximas semanas. La lluvia también genera el riesgo de que haya deslizamientos de lodo.

Los incendios ocurrieron en un momento difícil, en el que la ciudad está inmersa en una transición posterior a la pandemia de COVID-19 que ha reordenado la vida laboral y dejado muchos edificios del centro con altas tasas de desocupación.

Además, se están planificando los Juegos Olímpicos de 2028, y la región enfrenta la que podría ser la peor crisis de personas sin hogar de la nación, que había sido la prioridad de la alcaldesa de Los Ángeles, Karen Bass, antes de que los incendios se desataran la semana pasada.

El gobierno aún no ha dado a conocer estimaciones de daños, pero empresas privadas prevén que asciendan a decenas de miles de millones de dólares. Podría convertirse en el desastre causado por el fuego más costoso en la historia de Estados Unidos.

Alex Rosewood y casi toda su familia en Altadena, al noreste de Los Ángeles, perdieron sus hogares: su padre —con quien ella y su esposo vivían—, y su tía, tío y primo en la casa de al lado.

Se perdieron los recuerdos de toda una vida: el juego de naipes de la abuela Rosewood y su colcha inacabada. Las fotos de su boda. Los recuerdos de su abuelo, quien estuvo en la Armada. Todas son cosas que deseaba haber podido salvar en su frenética huida, mientras el humo tornaba el cielo gris y la casa de su primo comenzaba a arder.

Pero Altadena sigue siendo su hogar.

"Todos pensamos reconstruir, seguro", afirmó.

Habrá también preguntas inevitables sobre si es sensato seguir reconstruyendo en zonas que se sabe que son de alto riesgo, especialmente en una era de cambio climático.

¿Cómo serán los nuevos vecindarios? ¿Se utilizarán materiales y diseños resistentes al fuego? ¿Se necesitan más caminos, y más anchos, para permitir evacuaciones más rápidas y un acceso más fácil para los camiones de bomberos durante futuros incendios?

"Va a pasar un tiempo antes de que podamos entrar ahí y construir algo", observó Michael Hricak, profesor adjunto de arquitectura en la Universidad del Sur de California, refiriéndose a los peligrosos productos químicos y a los escombros que dejó el fuego.

En cuanto a nuevas construcciones, "no se trata de ser más fuerte que la madre naturaleza. Se trata de ser un tanto respetuoso de la madre naturaleza y conocer cuáles son los retos".

"Estamos simplemente propiciando otro problema para el futuro?", cuestionó Hricak.

La comunidad de Paradise en el norte de California —donde el incendio más letal en el estado dejó 85 muertos en 2018— ofrece una idea de lo meticulosas y difíciles que pueden ser la recuperación y la reconstrucción.

Ese fuego destruyó unas 11.000 viviendas, aproximadamente el 90% de las estructuras de la comunidad. Unas

3.200 casas y apartamentos han sido reconstruidos.

La localidad, que antes tenía 26.000 habitantes, ha tenido que hacer frente a elevados costos de construcción, costosas primas de seguro y a la incertidumbre sobre cuánto dinero recibirán quienes perdieron hogares por parte de Pacific Gas & Electric, una empresa eléctrica y de gas a la que se declaró responsable de provocar la tragedia.

En Los Ángeles —una ciudad conocida por sus densas capas de trámites burocráticos— Bass emitió esta semana una orden ejecutiva para facilitar que los residentes puedan proceder a la reconstrucción rápidamente.

El gobierno federal ya ha aprobado una partida de 100 millones de dólares para eliminar pinturas, productos de limpieza, asbestos, baterías y otros residuos domésticos de entre los escombros antes de que los equipos de trabajadores puedan comenzar a retirar los en otros lugares, la agencia está proporcionando apoyo para ayudar a la gente con alojamiento a corto plazo.

Michele Baron y su hija estaban entre quienes acudieron a un centro de recuperación en el oeste de Los Ángeles para averiguar cómo obtener nuevos certificados de nacimiento y tarjetas del Seguro Social.

Baron lo perdió casi todo cuando su apartamento en Pacific Palisades, donde había vivido durante 21 años, ardío hasta los cimientos. Su hija regresó a la propiedad y rescató un anillo y cerámica que había hecho cuando era niña.

A pesar del trauma, el plan es quedarse.

"Ahora que puedo ir a cualquier parte, en cierto modo no quiero", aseguró.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, January 13, 2025: Ohio Governor Mike DeWine announced that 28 colleges and universities in Ohio will receive a total of $7.5 million in funding for security projects that enhance the safety of students and staff.

"Ohio remains committed to ensuring our colleges and universities have the resources they need to make their campuses as safe as possible," said Governor DeWine. "These grants will allow us to continue this important work so students can focus on thriving in their studies, chasing their career goals, and reaching their full potential."

Winter Crisis Program Making a Difference

Winter heating assistance for residents who are without heat or threatened with disconnection is now making a difference in Lorain County.

Amanda was helped with furnace repair just before the holidays. She told advocates she was struggling after identity theft and illnesses. Help from Lorain County Community Action Agency's Winter Crisis Program got her furnace running and her payments have been stabilized by the Percentage of Income Payment Plan.

Thanks to the help, Amanda was able to provide small Christmas for her children.

Winter Crisis applicants must be living at or below 175% of the federal poverty line.

Crisis appointments can be scheduled at lccaa.secure.force.com/appointments for the following reasons:

- Bulk fuel users have less than a 10-day supply of wood, coal, pellets, propane or oil;
- Defaulted on PIPP payments.

These emergency situations qualify for an appointment with LCCAA staff, which will be conducted over the phone.

Those with a pending disconnection notice must provide an account number during appointment scheduling to place a hold on the disconnection. The appointment must be at least 48 hours before the scheduled disconnection. Missing or rescheduling the appointment may result in disconnection.

In person services are offered in three different locations this season:

- Seniors can walk in at the Lorain County Office on Aging in Elyria at 534 Abbe Road South on Mondays and Wednesdays.

Kent State kicks off 55th Commemoration of May 4 with play on student activism and book bans, Feb. 7-9

This year, Kent State University will hold the 55th commemoration honoring the memory of May 4, 1970, a tragic day when the Ohio National Guard fired on Kent State students during an anti-war protest on campus, killing four students, wounding nine others and sparking a turning point in American history. The commemoration in 2025 will highlight the ongoing significance of free speech, activism and education in shaping our collective history.

Kicking off the program for the annual May 4 Commemoration is a play that focuses on student activism and book bans. In partnership with the university's May 4 Education Committee, Kent State's School of Theatre and Dance will present "Trial by Fire" from Feb. 7-9, 2025 in Wright-Curtis Theatre in the Center for the Performing Arts on the Kent Campus. Set against the backdrop of censorship and the fight for intellectual freedom, the play centers on a Kent State graduate who is put "on trial" for allowing her students access to banned books.

In the play, word spreads that Georgia Grimm, the new Women's Studies teacher and recent Kent State graduate, has been allowing her high school students to access books from the governor's new "banned" list. In response, five teens look for a way to rise up and save their teacher's job and reputation. As the pressure mounts for Georgia, a young woman of color, to either resign or be fired, her students try to stop town leaders from burning books, leading to one student being injured in the flames.

"As the students rise to answer the call for activism, 'Trial by Fire' serves as a poignant reminder of the importance of standing up for free expression and confronting injustices," said Neil Cooper, Ph.D., professor and director of Kent State's School of Peace and Conflict Studies and chair of the May 4 Education Committee. "Through these May 4 programs, we continue to amplify the voices that challenge and shape the world around us."

Cooper explained that the May 4 Education Committee works year-round to bring meaningful educational programming that both reflects on the past and also inspires present and future generations.

The play's connection to Kent State runs deep, as both the protagonist and the playwright, Eric Mansfield, are alumni. Mansfield, of Akron, Ohio, earned his master's degree in public relations from Kent State in 2012 and is currently working on his Master of Fine Arts in playwriting. He also serves as assistant vice president for content strategy and communications at the university.

A member of the Dramatist Guild, Mansfield has written more than 20 plays. His work has been performed in Ohio, New York, Los Angeles, Boston and other locations. Mansfield has received many writing awards, including the 2023 Jean Kennedy Smith National Playwriting Award (second place) from the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., for his original play "Baron of Brown Street."

"The obstacles this young teacher and her students are facing in the play are the same ones we are seeing across our country right now and create a similar call to action that Kent State's students have historically endured," Mansfield said. "I'm honored that Kent State feels the connection between the plight of the characters in this play and the call to activism our students felt in 1970."

After "Trial by Fire" premiered in Akron in 2024, Mansfield was approached by the May 4 Educational Committee about bringing the play to Kent State as part of the committee's year-round programming and to emphasize the journey of a Kent State graduate who faces racism, sexism and other challenges and whose students become activists.

"Trial by Fire" at Kent State is directed by Courtney Brown, associate professor of voice and acting at Kent State's School of Theatre and Dance. Performances are at 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 7-8 and at 2 p.m. on Feb. 9. Tickets to "Trial by Fire" can be purchased through the Performing Arts Box Office by phone at 330-672-2787 or online at <https://kentstate.eventue.net/events/PABO-TH>. Ticket prices range from $12-$20. Tickets are free for Kent State students, faculty and staff.

For more information about "Trial by Fire," visit www.kent.edu/theatreanddance/trial-fire.

The annual May 4 Commemoration will take place at noon on May 4, 2025 at the Kent State Commons. Additional programs include the Jerry M. Lewis May 4 Lecture Series on May 2 and the annual Candlelight Walk and Vigil on May 3. These events and the yearlong educational initiatives help preserve the memory of May 4 while continuing the vital conversation about the power of activism and free speech. Governor DeWine announces Missing Persons Working Group

COLUMBUS, Ohio, January 13, 2025: Ohio Governor Mike DeWine today announced the creation of a working group to examine how missing persons cases are investigated and offer recommendations for improvement. Members of the new Missing Persons Working Group will review and study Ohio's resources and response to adult and juvenile missing persons cases including database usage, law enforcement staffing and training, and investigation best practices.

"Every life is valuable, which is why it is important to take these cases seriously," said Governor DeWine. "I've asked this group to examine different components of missing persons investigations to determine if the process can be improved. The ultimate goal here is to bring more missing people home safely."

The Missing Persons Working Group is led by Ohio Department of Public Safety Director Andy Wilson.

The Missing Persons Working Group will convene its first meeting at the Ohio Department of Public Safety on January 23, 2025, at 1:00 p.m. Recommendations are expected to be issued at the end of April.

Buckeye Trail Association announces effort for National Scenic Trail Designation

The Buckeye Trail Association (BTA) is thrilled to announce progress in its effort to secure National Scenic Trail (NST) designation for the 1,454-mile Buckeye Trail, which spans Ohio's diverse landscapes, connecting 47 counties and more than 100 communities

National Scenic Trail designation would see the Buckeye Trail join an elite group of 11 existing trails, making the Buckeye Trail the 5th largest in the nation, the only circumferential trail, and the first trail to receive this designation since 2009. This recognition would unlock significant benefits, including increased federal support, enhanced visibility, and expanded opportunities for community and economic development across Ohio.

Thanks to generations of BTA volunteers, staff, and a vast network of partners, Ohio's Buckeye Trail is already a force of nature," said Andrew Bashaw, Executive Director of the BTA, "National Scenic Trail status would ensure greater resources and recognition for our trail, enriching lives and fostering even greater volunteerism, sustainable tourism, and incomparable outdoor recreation opportunities around Ohio."

"This designation would recognize what we already know about the Buckeye Trail, that it's a premier hiking destination in the Midwest that offers unique opportunities to explore the entire state," added Ohio Department of Natural Resources Director Mary Mertz. "The loop around Ohio allows adventurers to visit our beautiful collection of state parks, wildlife areas, nature preserves, and forests."

The National Park Service held meetings around Ohio the week of January 13-17, 2025 as part of the feasibility study to determine National Scenic Trail status for the Buckeye Trail. The meetings have concluded, but you can still attend an additional virtual meeting is scheduled for January 23, 2025. For details visit www.buckeyetrail.org.

In Guatemala and Minnesota, holy feast brings migrant families hope and pride amid crackdown fears

By GIOVANNA DELL'ORTO Associated Press

WORTHINGTON, Minn., Jan 17, 2025 (AP): With their sparkling embroideries and colorful sashes flapping in the frigid wind, hundreds of Guatemalan faithful flocked to the Catholic church of this heartland farming town to celebrate their biggest festival yet in honor of the Black Christ of Esquipulas.

Just days before the start of a U.S. administration that's promised a swift immigration crackdown, they turned with hope and pride to the statue of the crucified Jesus, an elaborately carved replica of the most venerated image in their tropical homeland. Church members had it especially commissioned and brought from Guatemala at enormous expense, along with two massive marimbas. No feast is complete without these musical instruments.

"The Black Christ of Esquipulas has come taking planes and crossing borders like us," said Lucas López. Fourteen years ago, he left San Marcos, one of Guatemala's poorest regions, where communities nonetheless also organized festivals this week.

López and his wife, María Ramírez, are now raising their four children in Worthington, a town transformed by international migration. With his salary from the pork processing plant job for which he awakes daily at 4:20 a.m., the couple recently bought their first home a few blocks from church.

At Sunday's Mass that launched the daylong celebration, López and Ramírez — wearing sequined and embroidered huipil and skirt, colorful ribbons tied in her hair — led a dozen faithful in a traditional barefoot dance bringing the offerings to the altar.

"We're so happy to show that we are here, with our American dream, and also to share our culture with others," López said.

One crucifix for many countries — and their migrants

The original crucifix dates back to the late 16th century, and its feast day on January 15 draws thousands of pilgrims to the basilica in Esquipulas, a city on Guatemala's border with Honduras. On Sunday, Cardinal Fabio Baggio, long the head of the Vatican's migrants department, will also celebrate a special Esquipulas Mass at St. Peter's.

From New Mexico to Panama, and throughout Guatemala, nearly 300 churches are devoted to its veneration, making the image a source of communal identity even beyond its religious meaning, said Douglass Sullivan-González, a University of Mississippi history professor.

He added that it's been intertwined in modern Central American politics, from Indigenous rights — because centuries of candle smoke have given it a darker skin tone — to civil wars.

"The image itself comes alive in its context," Sullivan-González said.

For many in Worthington, that context is migration. Gratitude they made it to the United States, whether twelve months or two dozen years ago, mingles with nostalgia for customs and loved ones left behind.

The community includes undocumented migrants, asylum seekers and U.S. citizens, so apprehension over who will get to stay and for how long mixed with the pride of having pulled off a genuinely Guatemalan celebration some 2,500 miles (4,080 kilometers) away.

"The immigration police is coming already!" joked Benigno Miranda when an empty passenger van pulled up by the house where he and other church members had gathered to prepare the two marimbas to be transported to St. Mary's Church. That's what the van was really for.

"One can't be afraid all the time," added Miranda, reflecting widespread sentiment among those celebrating the festivities that God will decide their destinies more than shifting politics and policies.

Working a miracle to bring a sacred image to Minnesota

After all, the Black Christ of Esquipulas is known for miracles — as long as one truly has faith, choir member Lilia Soto said.

She remembers going to visit the sanctuary in Esquipulas with her grandmother before she came to Minnesota at 17 — and also recalls how, shortly afterward, an Immigration and Customs Enforcement raid at Worthington's meatpacking plant had many migrants terrified to leave their homes.

But now the Black Christ is here at St. Mary's — normally hanging on a wall by the entrance, though for the festivities it was mounted on a processional float decorated with the same kaleidoscopic fabrics as the women's dresses.

"When they were getting it down, I basically went running to give it a hug," Soto said.

That made it even better than in Esquipulas, where the image is untouchable behind glass, she said.

"It's like having a little piece of Guatemala in this church," added Dilma Pérez, her fellow choir member.

Pérez and her brother Sergio came to Worthington from San Marcos — where their parents regularly took them to church, but couldn't afford to travel to Esquipulas — more than two dozen years ago, when she was a teen and he about 9.

Now Pérez and her husband have three U.S.-born children, and also relatives in Guatemala who still depend on their remittances because wages in their region hover around $6 a day. They both work in a pork processing plant 45 minutes away by car.

Nevertheless, one taco and tamale sale at a time, the family led the community's effort over the last three years to fundraise the nearly $40,000 needed to have an artist in Esquipulas sculpt the statue, to buy the wooden marimbas, and to get them to Worthington.

"We sacrificed a lot," Sergio Pérez said Sunday afternoon, after serving the celebration's free taco lunch in the parish school cafeteria and before playing guitar in the hours-long prayer service. "It's been somewhat physically exhausting, but spiritually I feel strengthened."

Keeping traditions alive for future generations

For many diaspora communities, maintaining traditional celebrations while integrating in the life of the local church is crucial for the faith of future generations, said Jennifer Hughes, a history professor at the University of California, Riverside.

In the villages in San Marcos that also celebrated festivals this week for the Black Christ of Esquipulas, some participants lamented losing many youth to migration.

"Unfortunately, our people have to migrate to get ahead," said Freddy De León, a dancer in one of the processions.

But ties remain, also through remittances. The sister of another organizer, Luis Ramírez, watched a live Facebook video of their hamlet's festivities from her New Jersey home.

"That's how the tradition continues," he said.

In Worthington, where students of color constitute more than 80% of those enrolled in K-12 and speak more than 40 languages, children are growing accustomed to intercultural mixing.

Downtown, a flyer advertising the celebration in Spanish hung in a Guatemalan corner store, three blocks from where lifelong residents ice fished in the middle of frozen Lake Okabena.

That's one thing Ramírez isn't eager to try, though the cold no longer fazes her. Her prayers to the Lord of Esquipulas center on a binational future for her family — that they can one day travel to Guatemala without losing the grip on their American dream.

During Mass, the procession of the crucifix to the altar was preceded by dancers carrying flags — that of Guatemala and the Stars and Stripes next to each other in the center — and accompanied by the marimba tune of "Our Lord of Esquipulas."

"It was very emotional. It's what we've learned since our birth," said one of the players, Antulio Juarez. He's spent 12 years in Worthington, but learned marimba music by ear from his grandfather in Guatemala's volcanic highlands.

Sergio Pérez hopes the opportunity to hear this music will help keep the festival growing for years. Beyond that, he asks for no other miracles.

"I don't ask him for anything, because I feel that he's already blessed me so much," he said of the Esquipulas image.

His sister Dilma was equally self-effacing — and trusting.

"Faith is what keeps us going no matter what life confronts us with," she said. "We don't do it to please anybody but God."

Argentina impulsa el uso de dólares y otras divisas en la economía cotidiana

BUENOS AIRES, Jan 17, 2025 (AP): El gobierno argentino comenzó a implementar el viernes una serie de medidas para facilitar el uso indistinto de monedas en la economía cotidiana como la posibilidad de mostrar de forma simultánea los precios de los productos en pesos y divisas y realizar pagos

Jan 16, 2025: El conductor de camión de Texas acusado en la muerte de 53 migrantes que viajaban en un remolque sofocante sin aire acondicionado se declaró culpable el jueves por la tragedia de 2022 que se convirtió en el intento de tráfico de personas más mortal de la nación a través de la frontera entre Estados Unidos y México.

Homero Zamorano Jr. se declaró culpable en un tribunal federal de Texas de un cargo de asociación delictuosa para transportar extranjeros con resultado de muerte, causar lesiones corporales graves y poner vidas en peligro.
