The "Big Blow": Disaster Strikes – The Great Lakes Storm of 1913

If you want to learn about the deadliest disaster ever to hit the Great Lakes, come to The Six Lost Lorain Boats in the Great Storm of 1913 at Lorain Public Library System's Main Library on Thursday, Jan. 30, 2014 at 7 p.m. The Main Library is located at 351 W. Sixth St. in Lorain.

Preregistration is required and is available online at LorainPublicLibrary.org or by calling the Main Library at 440-244-1192 or 1-800-322-READ, ext. 450. Matthew Weisman from the Lorain Historical Society will present this local history program.

The Great Lakes Storm of 1913—historically referred to as the "Big Blow," the "Freshwater Fury," or the "White Hurricane"—was a blizzard with hurricane-force winds that devastated the Great Lakes basin in the Midwestern United States and the Canadian province of Ontario from Nov. 7 through Nov. 10, 1913.

The storm was most powerful on Nov. 9, battering and overturning ships on four of the five Great Lakes, particularly Lake Huron. Deceptive lulls in the storm and the slow pace of weather reports contributed to the storm's destructiveness.

The most destructive natural disaster to hit the lakes, the Great Lakes Storm destroyed 19 ships and stranded 19 others. More than 250 people lost their lives in this storm.

Latino groups to launch massive voter registration—nationwide!

By LAURA WIDES-MUÑOZ, AP Hispanic Affairs Writer

MIAMI, Jan. 23, 2014 (AP): Fewer than half of adult Latino citizens voted in the 2012 presidential elections, according to the U.S. Census, and that has prompted two national Latino organizations to step up voter registration efforts this year, months ahead of the 2014 elections.

National Council of La Raza (NCLR) and Mi Familia Vota Education Fund on Thursday launched a new campaign to register more than 250,000 voters. Traditionally voter registration drives get going in the spring and summer before the election. By starting in January, the groups hope to top their 2012 campaign of more than 180,000 registered voters.

"You have parties and campaigns that are trying to get their specific candidates elected. We look at voter registration and engagement another way. We look at it as a way for Latinos to have their voices heard on issues they care about," said Clarissa Martínez De Castro, who heads up NCLR's immigration and civic engagement campaigns. "Voter registration is not the end game. It's one piece of the puzzle.

Americans tend to register to vote and to turn out in higher numbers during presidential elections, but Martínez De Castro said the potential for Congress to take up immigration reformcombined with Latinos' frustration over the current gridlock-creates an additional emotional, as well as practical, incentive to vote.

"In 2012 they went to the polls with the economy in their minds and immigration in their hearts," she said.

About 13.7 million, or just under 60 percent, of the nation's 23.3 million adult Latino citizens were registered in 2012, but at least 2 million those didn't vote, according to the U.S. Census. Advocates say the number is much higher, as people often report voting even if they didn't.

De Castro said the campaign will focus on those adults who have yet to register as well as the estimated 50,000 Latino citizens who turn 18 each month NCLR and the union-backed Mi Familia plan to start their campaign with millions of mailers in Colorado, Nevada, Arizona, and Texas, adding in Florida and California in the spring.

She noted that role Latino support played in Nevada U.S.

Senator Harry Reid's reelection, during his tough 2010 race.

The early efforts of the two organizations are part of a broader strategy to increase the political engagement of the nation's fast-growing and diverse Latino communities. Groups like the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC), the National Association of Latino Elected and Appointed Officials, and Voto Latino also play key roles in registering Latinos, as do the country's Latino media.

Mi Familia Executive Director Ben Monterroso said he and other Latino advocates are trying to get away from the "Roman candle" approach to Latino voter outreach, where candidates and parties make dazzling but brief overtures only during the final months of the campaign. Monterroso said he's looking long-term, not just at the 2014 elections or even the next presidential race.

"I see this as a building block not just to the 2016 election but to 2020. We have not yet reached our potential, and we will not reach our potential if we don't continue building the vote year after year."

Latinos lanzan campaña de empadronamiento

Por LAURA WIDES-MUÑOZ, Associated Press

MIAMI, 23 de enero del 2014 (AP): Menos de uno de cada dos ciudadanos latinos votaron en las elecciones presidenciales de 2012 de acuerdo con el Censo, lo cual apremió a organizaciones nacionales a impulsar el empadronamiento de cara a las elecciones de noviembre próximo.

El Consejo Nacional de La Raza y el Fondo Educativo Mi Familia Vota se disponían el jueves a lanzar una campaña para empadronar a 250.000 votantes nuevos. Las campañas empadronamiento suelen comenzar a mediados de año. Al lanzarla en enero, los grupos esperan superar su campaña de 2012, cuando empadronaron a 180.000 votantes.

"Hay partidos campañas que buscan asegurar el triunfo de determinados candidatos. Nosotros tenemos otra visión del empadronamiento y la participación ciudadana. Lo consideramos un medio para que los latinos hagan oír sus voces sobre asuntos que les interesan, dijo Clarissa Martínez de Castro, quienes encabezan las campañas de La Raza sobre inmigración participación cívica. "El empadronamiento no es el final de juego. Es una pieza del rompecabezas'

Las cifras de empadronados y de votos aumentan en las elecciones presidenciales, pero Martínez de Castro dijo que la posibilidad de que el Congreso discuta una reforma inmigratoria—y impotencia que sienten los latinos frente a la parálisis legislativa actual-genera incentivos adicionales para votar, no solo afectivos, sino también prácticos.

"Cuando fueron a votar en 2012, llevaban la economía en la mente y la inmigración en el corazón", afirmó. Unos 13,7 millones, algo menos del 60%, de los 23,3 millones de ciudadanos latinos estaban empadronados en 2012, pero al menos dos millones de estos no votaron, de acuerdo con el Censo. Los promotores dicen que la cifra es mucho más alta. ya que mucha gente dice que votó aunque no lo hizo.

De Castro dijo que la campaña se concentrará en los que aún no se han empadronado y en los aproximadamente 50.000 latinos que cumplen los 18 años cada mes. La Raza y Mi Familia planean iniciar su campaña con el envío de millones de cartas en Colorado, Nevada, Arizona y Texas, a los que sumarán Florida y California en abril.

Destacó el papel del apoyo latino en la reelección del senador por Nevada Harry Reid, quien enfrentó una campaña muy disputada.

Estos esfuerzos son parte de una estrategia más amplia para incrementar participación política de las comunidades hispanas, cuyo número y diversidad crecen constantemente. Agrupaciones como la Liga Ciudadanos Latinoamericanos Unidos (LULAC en inglés), la Asociación Nacional de Funcionarios Latinos Elegidos y Designados y Voto Latino cumplen un papel crucial en el empadronamiento, lo mismo que la prensa hispana.

El director ejecutivo de Mi Familia, Ben Monterroso, dijo que la intención es descartar el método de la "bengala", que consiste en hacer campañas deslumbrantes pero breves en los últimos meses de campaña. La campaña es a largo plazo, va más allá incluso de las presidenciales de 2016.

"Lo veo como un paso no solo hacia la elección de 2016, sino a la de 2020. No hemos alcanzado nuestro potencial v no lo alcanzaremos si no seguimos consiguiendo el

Texas ejecuta mexicano pese a presión diplomática

Por MICHAEL GRACZYK, Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, 23 de enero del 2014 (AP): El mexicano Edgar Tamayo fue ejecutado el miércoles en Texas por el asesinato de un oficial de policía de Houston hace 20 años, a pesar de las súplicas y la presión diplomática del gobierno mexicano y del Departamento de Estado para detener la pena capital.

Tamayo, de 46 años, recibió una invección letal por los disparos que cegaron la vida del oficial Guy Gaddis en enero de 1994.

Cuando un guardián le preguntó si tenía una última declaración, musitó "no" y movió la cabeza. A medida que la dosis letal de pentobarbital comenzó a hacer efecto, respiró unas cuantas veces y luego hizo un ronquido ligeramente audible antes de $de jarse\,de\,mover por completo.$ Fue declarado muerto 17 minutos después de que le administraron la sustancia, a las 9:32 de la noche.

La ejecución, la primera de este año en el estado con mayor cantidad de reos ejecutados del país, se retrasó por más de tres horas mientras la Corte Suprema de Estados Unidos sopesaba apelaciones de último momento.

Tamayo nunca miró hacia la madre de Gaddis, dos hermanos y otros dos familiares que veían a través de una ventana.

"Es un cobarde justo como cuando le disparó a mi hermano en la nuca y murió como un cobarde", dijo Glen Gaddis.

Había varias decenas de policías y simpatizantes del patrullero muerto que aceleraban sus motocicletas fuera de la prisión antes de que deiaran ingresar a los testigos dentro de la cámara de la muerte. Tamayo no escogió ningún testigo propio.

"Un pedazo de mi corazón hecho pedazos se siente mejor", dijo la madre del oficial, Gayle.

La ejecución se produjo después de que la Corte Suprema de Estados Unidos v federales tribunales rechazaron apelaciones de último momento, y de que los funcionarios de Texas desdeñaron los argumentos de que la detención y pena de muerte de Tamayo estaban viciados porque no le informaron, según indica un acuerdo internacional, que podía recibir asistencia jurídica de su país tras el

Los abogados también alegaron sin éxito que no era mentalmente capaz y por lo tanto no era elegible para la pena de muerte, y que los procedimientos de clemencia del estado fueron injustos.

La Junta de Perdón v Libertad Condicional de Texas había rechazado el martes el pedido de clemencia de Tamavo.

"No importa de dónde sea la persona", dijo Lucy Nashed, portavoz del gobernador Rick Perry. "El que cometa un crimen despreciable como éste en Texas, queda sujeto a nuestras leyes estatales, incluido un juicio justo con jurado, y la pena máxima".

Las abogadas de Tamayo, Sandra L. Babcock y Maurie emitieron comunicado tras la decisión de la Corte Suprema.

"Hoy Texas una vez más ha demostrado su total desprecio por el imperio de la ley y los compromisos de los tratados de Estados Unidos. En su afán de ejecutar al señor Tamayo, el gobernador y el fiscal intencionalmente hicieron caso omiso de las promesas que hicieron a los líderes de nuestra nación que de garantizarían una revisión de la violación de los derechos consulares del señor Tamavo".

dijeron. "La ejecución del señor Tamayo viola los compromisos de tratados (firmados) por Estados Unidos, amenaza los intereses de política exterior de la nación, y socava la seguridad de todos los estadounidenses en el extranjero", añadieron Babcock y Levin.

Gaddis, quien llevaba dos años en la policía, llevaba a Tamavo v otro hombre desde el lugar de un robo cuando, según muestra la evidencia, el oficial recibió tres disparos en la cabeza y el cuello con una pistola que Tamayo había ocultado en sus pantalones. El autose estrelló, y Tamayo huyó a pie pero fue capturado a pocas cuadras, todavía esposado, con el reloj y el collar de la víctima del robo.

Funcionarios mexicanos y los abogados de Tamayo dijeron que estaba protegido por una cláusula de la Convención de Viena sobre Relaciones Consulares de 1963. La asistencia jurídica que garantiza ese tratado pudiera haber descubierto pruebas para impugnar la pena capital por asesinato o que evitaran que Tamayo fuese condenado a la penade muerte, dijeron.

Los registros muestran que el consulado se enteró del caso hasta que el juicio estaba a punto de comenzar.

El secretario de Estado John Kerry había pedido al procurador general de Texas,

Greg Abbott, que demorara la ejecución, diciendo que "podría afectar la manera como los ciudadanos norteamericanos son tratados en otros países". El Departamento de Estado repitió esa postura el miércoles

Pero el despacho de Abbott v la fiscalía de distrito del Condado Harris se opusieron a cualquier retraso.

Por lo menos otros dos reos en circunstancias similares fueron ejecutados en Texas en años recientes.

El gobierno mexicano expresó en un comunicado tras la muerte de Tamayo que "la importancia fundamental de este caso es que es el respeto al derecho de acceso a la protección que brindan nuestros consulados a los mexicanos en el exterior". A comienzo de la semana había declarado que se oponía con firmeza a la ejecución.

Tamayo estaba en Estados Unidos sin autorización y tenía antecedentes penales en California, donde cumplió una pena de prisión por robo y recibió la libertad condicional. según registros de la prisión.

Tamayo estaba entre más de 40 ciudadanos mexicanos condenados a muerte en Estados Unidos cuando la Corte Internacional de Justicia de La Haya, Holanda, falló en 2004 que no les habían informado debidamente de sus derechos consulares. La Corte Suprema indicó posteriormente que audiencias solicitadas por la Corte Internacional sobre los casos de esos reos sólo eran obligatorias si el Congreso emitía una ley al respecto.

"Desafortunadamente, esa ley nunca se aprobó". reconoció la Secretaría de Relaciones Exteriores de México

México lamenta la ejecución en Texas del connacional Edgar Tamayo

El mexicano Edgar Tamayo Arias fue ejecutado el día de hoy en Texas. La ejecución viola la Convención de Viena sobre Relaciones Consulares y contraviene el fallo de la Corte Internacional de Justicia dictado en el Caso Avena (2004). Esta decisión ordenó a Estados Unidos a revisar v reconsiderar los veredictos de culpabilidad y la pena capital impuesta al señor Edgar Tamayo, así como a otros 50 connacionales, cuyo derecho a la notificación y asistencia consular fue violado por las autoridades de Texas al momento de su detención.

Desde que tuvo conocimiento del caso del señor Tamavo. la Secretaría de Relaciones Exteriores (SRE) desplegó una serie de acciones hasta agotar todas las instancias a su alcance. tanto internas como internacionales, con el fin de obtener la revisión y reconsideración del caso por parte de las autoridades judiciales texanas, a la luz de la falta de notificación consular.

El Gobierno de México hace un llamado para que tomen acciones efectivas y evite que se ejecuten otras condenas en desacato del fallo Avena que dañen el régimen de asistencia y protección consular acordado entre los países.

La SRE reitera que la importancia fundamental de este caso es el respeto al derecho de acceso a la protección que brindan nuestros consulados a los mexicanos en el exterior.

La Cancillería mexicana ha brindado la debida asistencia consular a los familiares del connacional ejecutado. A solicitud de la familia Tamayo, dicha ayuda se mantendrá en el proceso de traslado a México de los restos de Edgar Tamayo.

Mexico laments the execution in Texas of its national Edgar Tamayo

The Mexican national Edgar Arias Tamayo was executed today in Texas. The execution violates the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations and contravenes the judgment delivered by the International Court of Justice in the Avena case (2004). That decision ordered the United States to review and reconsider the conviction and the death sentence imposed on Mr. Edgar Tamayo, and on 50 other nationals, whose rights to consular notification and assistance were violated by the Texan authorities at the moment of detention.

Since becoming aware of Mr. Tamayo's case, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (SRE for its acronym in Spanish) has deployed a series of actions until exhausting all possible avenues available, both domestically and internationally, in order to obtain the review and reconsideration of the case by the Texan judicial authorities, in light of the lack of consular notification.

The Government of Mexico calls for effective action to be taken to avoid the execution of other sentences in contempt of the Avena judgment which would damage the regime of consular assistance and protection as agreed between the countries.

The SRE reiterates that the issue of fundamental importance in this case is the respect for the right of access to protection provided by our consulates to Mexicans abroad.

The Mexican Ministry of Foreign Affairs has provided due consular assistance to the families of the national being executed. At the request of the Tamayo family, such assistance will continue throughout the process of transferring the remains of Edgar Tamayo to Mexico.

Michigan busca atraer inmigrantes a Detroit Por JEFF KAROUB y DAVID EGGERT, Associated Press

DETROIT, 23 de enero del 2014 (AP): El gobernador Rick Snyder anunció que solicitará al gobierno del presidente Barack Obama que habilite miles de visas de trabajo para atraer inmigrantes que vivan y trabajen en la ciudad de Detroit, sumida en una profunda bancarrota.

En una conferencia de prensa el jueves, el gobernador de Michigan dijo que busca 50.000 visas exclusivamente para Detroit a lo largo de un lustro.

Las visas de trabajo no son asignadas por región ni por estado. Se otorgana inmigrantes con títulos profesionales avanzados o que han demostrado habilidad excepcional en determinadas actividades.

Snyder dijo a The Associated Press antes de la conferencia de prensa que una "oportunidad clave" para acelerar la recuperación de Detroites atraer inmigrantes autorizados. Dijo que la propuesta es un modo en que el gobierno federal puede ayudar sin necesidad de un rescate financiero.

Snyderequiparólaidea a las exenciones "de interés nacional" otorgadas a los médicos que acceden a trabajar en áreas necesitadas a cambio de la tarjeta de residente. Según la singular propuesta, una cuarta parte de las 40.000 visas EB-2emitidas anualmente serían destinadas a dichos inmigrantes dispuestos a vivir y trabajar durante cinco años en Detroit, una ciudad conmovida por la mayor bancarrota mu-nicipal en la historia de Estados Unidos cuyos vecindarios se han visto afectados por una prolongada merma de población.

"Enviemos un mensaie a todo el mundo: Detroit, Michigan, está abierto al mundo", dijo Snyder en su conferencia de prensa, un día después que respaldó planes de dedicar hasta 350 millones de dólares en fondos estatales para reforzar los fondos de pensión de De-troite impedir la venta de objetos de arte valiosos en propiedad de la municipalidad. Snyder presentó el plan de inmigración en las oficinas del IDEAL Group, una compañía de manufactura y construcción en Detroit cuyo fundador es nieto de inmigrantes mexicanos. El alcalde Mike Duggan, miembros del concejo municipal y otros líderes comunitarios estuvieron presentes.

En una entrevista el miércoles, el gobernador dijo a la AP que la propuesta no requerirá rescate financiero.
"Esto involucra trabajar con reglas inmigratorias y límites de visas", afirmó. "Existe un camino sin necesidad de dinero efectivo para acelerar significativamente cuperación de Detroit". La portavoz de Snyder, Sara Wurfel, dijo que su gobierno planea presentar la solicitud innovadora al gobierno federal estamisma semana, de serposible.

El gobernador busca flexibilidad en una exención que permite a trabajadores extranjeros con una maestría o doctorado—o que hayan demostrado habilidades excepcionales en ciencias, negocios o el arte—venir a Estados Unidos si es "de interés nacional". Snyder quiere ampliar la definición de interés nacional para aplicarlo al área geográfica de Detroit.

Según el plan propuesto, Detroitrecibiría 5.000 visas en el primer año, 10.000 en los tres años siguientes y 15.000 en el quinto año. Snyder está quinto ano. Silyuci esta particularmente interesado en mantener a los estudiantes extranjeros en Michigan con títulos avanzados en ciencia, tecnología, ingeniería o matemáticas.

"Muchos de ellos vienen a recibir sus títulos, les damos una educación de nivel mundial y después les decimos que se vavan", afirmó.

David Eggert reportó desde Lansing, Michigan.

Michigan seeks visas to lure immigrants to Detroit

By JEFF KAROUB and DAVID EGGERT, Associated Press

DETROIT, Jan. 23, 2014 (AP): Michigan Gov. Rick Snyder asked the federal government Thursday to set aside thousands of work visas for bankrupt Detroit, a bid to revive the decaying city by attracting talented immigrants who are willing to move there and stay for five years.

The Republican gover-nor has routinely touted immigration as a powerful potential force for growing Detroit's economy, saying immigrant entrepreneurs start many small businesses and file patents at twice the rate of U.S.-born citizens.

"Let's send a message to the entire world: Detroit, Michigan, is open to the world," Snyder said at a news conference.

The proposal involves EB-2 visas, which are of-fered every year to legal immigrants who have advanced degrees or show exceptional ability in certain fields

But the governor's am-bitious plan faces significant hurdles: The visas are not currently allocated by region or state. And the number he is seeking-50,000 over five years—would be a quarter of the total EB-2 visas offered. The program would require no federal financial bailout, the governor said, only the easing of immi-gration rules and visa limits to help fill jobs in auto-motive engineering, information technology, health care and life sciences.

"It's really taking up the offer of the federal govern-ment to say they want to help more," Snyder said. "Isn't this a great way that doesn't involve large-scale financial contributions from the federal govern-ment to do something dramatic in Detroit?"

He said the Obama administration has "been re-ceptive to us bringing significant ideas to them, and this would be near the top of the

Snyder, a first-term governor who made millions as a computer industry executive and venture capitalist, said it's not clear whether the White House could act administratively or if such a change would require legislative action.

He said he's talking about the proposal with Michigan's congressional delegation and plans private meetings Friday with administration officials while in Washington for a panel discussion about the economic benefits of an immigration overhaul.

The governor's proposal seemed to take officials by surprise at the State Department, which works with the Homeland Security Department to decide on visa requests.

In Washington, State Department deputy spokes-woman Marie Harf told reporters Thursday that she was aware of the governor's comments but had no immediate response. Snyder's office has said immigrants created nearly one-third of the high-tech businesses in Michigan in the last decade, and he cited a study that found for every job that goes to an immigrant, 2.5 are created for U.S.-born citizens.

Being more welcoming to immigrants would also make the city more attractive to employers.

"The point isn't just to say, 'Let's have a lot of jobs created in Detroit for immigrants," he said. "Let's step this up. Let's do something that could really be a jump start to the continuing comeback of Michigan and Detroit." The city, the largest in American history to file for bankruptcy, has been hol-lowed out by a long popula-tion decline, from 1.8 million people in its heyday of the 1950s, to about 713,000 today at the time of the 2010 census. During that time, Detroit steadily lost many of its manufacturing jobs, and huge numbers of workers fled to the suburbs.

The governor is trying to find flexibility in a waiver that allows foreign workers with a master's degree or higher-or who demonstrate exceptional skills in science, business or art—to come to

A look at the visas sought by Mich. Gov. Snyder

Jan. 23, 2014 (AP): Michigan Gov. Rick Snyder wants the federal government to set aside 50,000 work visas for bankrupt Detroit over the nextfive years. Here are some facts and figures about the EB-2 visas he is seeking:

 NUMBER AVAIL-ABLE: 40,000 each year nationally, nearly 30 percent of the 140,000 employmentbased visas overall. Snyder wants to get a quarter of them each year for immigrants will-ing to live and work for five years in Detroit.

• WHO THEY TARGET: Immigrants who generally have a master's degree or higher or show exceptional ability in science, business or the arts. The government also offers a a waiver for applicants without a job lined up or whose em-ployers cannot show that there are no qualified U.S. citizens to fill the position. The waivers require proof that granting the visa is in the "national interest

• WHAT THEY OFFER: The visas provide legal residency, the ability to work in the U.S., the freedom to leave and return unrestricted and the ability to bring dependents such as a spouse or children

•WHAT ARE THE LIM-ITS: Under U.S. law, no one country can account for more work visa applications.

Stephanie Serda: Former PHCA director now at OSU extension

By Kevin Milliken, La Prensa Correspondent

Jan. 18, 2014: Stephanie Serda has made a career so far out of helping people, espe-cially families within the Latino community.

Now the former executive director of the Perrysburg Heights Community Association (PHCA) is helping poor families find their way to ramilies find their Way to healthier eating and better liv-ing, despite their financial challenges, as a program as-sistant for the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Pro-gram (EFNEP), administered through the Ohio State University Extension- Lucas

"We are really trying to reach out across Lucas County, just to promote healthy lifestyles through education on healthy eating, hearing nhysically active," being physically active," said Ms. Serda. "We have a curriculum we are following, helping folks through the food groups and giving them ideas on how to shop and save and economically pre-pare proper meals. With the way things are going, every little bit helps."

The nutrition program can be seen as an anti-poverty pro-gram, because it helps finan-cially-struggling families learn how to find and prepare low-cost, nutritious foods in an appealing way—including fresh produce. "We're definitely looking at those folks who are low-income, especially families who have children in the home," explained Ms. Serda. The federal government has changed its official nutrition information in recent years. What used to be "the foodpyramid" is now called "my plate" (http://myplate.gov/), which instructs individuals on proper serving sizes and how many servings per day are appro-

"If there is no grocery store, what is available—corner stores, places like that," said Ms. Serda. "We just try to take that into consideration and try to give them more things to think about."

The ultimate goal is to in-crease the client's health and try to create awareness, if it's not already there, about healthier lifestyles

Ms. Serda, a sports management major in college, sees her new role as a continuation of a career that always has been aimed at helping Latino families. Her education and experience are blended in her new role.

"I just love being able to work out in the community. Promoting healthy lifestyles is something I've always en-joyed doing," she said. "This is a new way to incorporate that with working in the com-munity. It's nice to be able to pull from both of those and do my part."

The OSU Extension runs an eight-week class for adults for about an hour each weekly session. Youth classes also are available. Those classes run six weeks, either in-school or after-school.

"Every week we do a tast-ing, provide them with a recipe to make what's featured in the tasting, then give them an 'enhancement tool,'" said Ms. Serda, a reference to kitchen utensils such as measuring cups or spoons.

Two Toledo firefighters killed in building fire

Sunday, city officials said. Firefighters Stephen Machcinski, 42, and James Dickman, 31, were killed while fighting the fire in the six-unit building, Toledo Fire Department Chief Luis Santiago said at a news conference Sunday night.

He said that Machcinski was a 16-year veteran, while Dickman had been on the job for only six months. Both worked together at the same firehouse in the city.

Santiago said that the fire department will fully investigate the blaze, which was reported around 3:30 p.m.

Ray Abouarab, the building's owner, told the Blade that there were seven tenants in six apartments in the building on Magnolia Street near the Huron Market and all are believed to be safe. One tenant told him that her pit bull puppy wasn't able to escape the fire.

The firefighters were attacking the blaze when they became disoriented, a bat-talion chief told WTOL-TV. Chief Santiago said that after the two firefighters suffered injuries inside of the fellow building, firefighters made "valiant efforts" to remove them and begin life-saving measures.

Ohio attorney general warns of potential debt collection scams

COLUMBUS, Jan. 18, 2014 (AP): Ohio's attorney general says residents should watch out for potential debt collection

Attorney General Mike DeWine says his office received more than 2,400 collections complaints in 2013 and hundreds related to phony claims that consumers had owed money.

The office said that those who fall for such scams often report losing $200 to $300, though some lose thousands.

DeWine says the scams typically begin with a phone call from someone who says the consumer is in default on a loan. The callers will request immediate payment and refuse to provide documentation of

However, DeWine is reminding Ohioans that third-party debt collectors must send a letter within five days after first contacting the consumer by phone. And the collectors cannot contact consumers without identifying themselves.

Francois' langur monkey born at the Zoo

A male Francois' langur has been born at the Toledo Zoo; visitors can see him in-doors, with his parents and siblings, at the Zoo's Primate Forest. He was born on Jan. 18, 2014 and is named Tam (tahm), which means "heart" in Vietname

This is the sixth offspring for the baby's parents, and his mother is providing excellent maternal care. Both parents arrived at the Zoo in May, 2000 on recom-mendation from the Francois' langur Species Survival Plan (SSP), a cooperative breeding program coordinated by the Association of Zoos and Aquariums (AZA).

As an adult, a Francois' langur has a long, black, silky coat with a white band of cheek fur and a pointed crest of hair on top of its head. A typical Francois' langur baby, however, is predomi-nantly orange. Biologists be-lieve the orange color helps the baby blend in with foliage in the tree canopies of its native habitat in Vietnam, southeast China. and central Laos. Fewer than 2,500 Francois' langurs are estimated to survive in the wild, with hunting and habitat loss contributing to their status as an endangered species. The Toledo Zoo is one of fewer than 20 institutions in the United States to exhibit and breed Francois' langurs.

Open Book series features an eternal love story

The Toledo-Lucas County Public Library's Open Book series will feature a talk about an eternal love story by a Toledo author, just in time for Valentine's Day.

Dr. S. Amjad Hussain will discuss his work With Whom Shall I Talk in the Dead of Night, a book of letters written to his deceased wife, published last year (2013) by the University of Toledo Press. The letters were written by Dr. Hussain to his wife Dottie who died of cancer in 2006 after a partnership of 38 years. The talk is scheduled at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, February 12, 2014 in the McMaster Center at Main Library, 325 Michigan St.

Dr. Hussain said the idea for writing the book came to him as a way to cope with the overwhelming sense of loss he felt after his wife's death. He wrote the letters to Dottie trip.

"For two years I wrote to her from likely and unlikely places - parks, airplanes, mountain hikes and my favorite chair in my bedroom - to share with her what was happening in my life after passing and also to reaffirm my love for her. It was soothing and healing," Dr. Hussain states in the introduction to the book.

The book is not only an expression of one man's grief, but also a celebration of the life he lived with his wife and since her passing.
Dr. Hussain describes both the mundane and the eventful from the evolution of the lives of his children to his own travels to his home country of Pakistan and his intellectual pursuits. It also includes email from readers of Dr. Hussain's columns that appeared in The Blade which as if she was on an extended focused on his feelings after his wife's death.

Dr. Hussain's columns ap-pear each Monday in the daily newspaper, and in 2007 he discussed his personal struggles in several of the essays. The columns drew wide responses from readers who shared their own stories of overcoming grief and their support for him in his time of difficulty.

Others who have felt grief over the loss of a loved one might find comfort in Dr. Hussain's writings. Readers will also find a love story that has not ended.

The talk is free and open to the public. Following Dr. Hussain's talk, there will be a book signing.

Report: US Latinos optimistic amid challenges

National Public Radio, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and the Harvard School of Public Health polled nearly 1,500 Latino Americans on topics including education, finances, religion, health and jobs. More than half, or 52 percent, stated no preference on being called "Latino" or "Hispanic."

About 44 percent of Latinos live in predominantly Latino communities, the report found. Latinos reported facing several challenges in their communities, with 16 percent experiencing crime and violence, and 10 percent reporting economic issues

About 40 percent of Latinos rated that the quality of available housing in their community is fair or poor. More than a third also rated as fair or poor the public transportation system (36 percent) and availability of recreational facilities for exercise and sports (36 percent). Nearly the same number, 34 percent, said safety from crime in their community was fair or poor.

Despite these concerns. the majority of Latinos, 89 percent, said they are satisfied with their communi-cates. About a quarter, or 26 percent, said they have experienced discrimination in the past year and believe it was because they are Latino. About 1 in 10 Latinos said they believe they received poor health care within the past five years because of their ethnic background, or because they spoke with an accent. Among the Latinos who have received health care in the past year, 19 percent rated health care services as fair or poor.

Like most Americans, Latinos also worry about job security and finances. About 45 percent of employed Latinos feared they or someone in their household will lose a job within the next year. More than a third, or 36 percent, say their personal finances are not so good or

More than three-quarters of Latinos, or 77 percent, think their children will have better educational opportunities than they did, and 83 percent think their children will have better employment opportunities. About 80 percent of Latinos think their children will be better off than they are when their children reach the age they are today. About 90 percent of Latinos are satisfied with their lives overall.

The report compares Latino immigrants to US-American-born Latinos, Immigrants overall were more optimistic about their future than native-born. About 91 percent of Latino immigrants feel their children would have better educational opportunities than themselves compared to 68 percent of native-born Latinos.

Immigrants were more likely than native-born Latinos to have only a high school education or less. 74 percent compared to 49 percent. Employed immigrants were twice as likely as employed native-born Latinos to say they were concerned about themselves or someone in their household losing their job within the next year. They were also twice as likely to say they were not confident they had enough money or health insurance to pay for a major illness, with 67 percent compared to 34 percent.

The study also examined Latinos by dividing them according to heritage: Cubans, Dominicans, South Americans, Central Americans, Puerto Ricans, and Mexicans. It found that Cubans were ahead of most other Latinos in many social economic indicators. including education and home ownership. Puerto Ricans were more likely to speak English than Spanish at home. Central Americans were the least educated among poll participants, with more than half having less than a high school education.

Study: In US, 49 percent of black men and 40 percent of white men arrested by age 23

By JAKE PEARSON, Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 20, 2014 (AP): Nearly half of black men and 40 percent of white men are arrested at least once on non-traffic-related crimes by the time they turn 23. That's according to a

The estimates published this month by criminologists at the University of South Carolina and the University at Albany didn't rely on arrest records but on an annual federal survey of 7,000 young people who answered questions from 1997 to 2008.

The authors found that by age 18, 30 percent of black men, 26 percent of Latino men and 22 percent of white men have been arrested.

By 23, those numbers climb to 49 percent for black men, 44 percent for Latino men and 38 percent for white men.

Push for driver's licenses for Massachusetts immigrants

BOSTON Ian 25 2014 (AP): The largest immigrant advocacy group in New England is again pushing lawmakers to support a bill that would allow foreign-born residents living in the country illegally to secure Massachusetts driver's licenses.

Massachusetts law currently requires immigrants seeking a driver's license to prove that they are in the country legally.

The Massachusetts Immigrant and Refugee Advocacy Coalition says removing that barrier-as proposed under the Safe Driving Bill-would make Massachusetts roads more secure ensuring immigrants living in the country without documentation are trained, licensed, and insured.

Supporters say the bill would particularly help people who do not live near public transportation. It also would protect the health and well-being of children who depend on their parents in medical emergencies.

Lawmakers have scheduled a hearing on the bill for Feb. 5.

500.000 empresas miran estatus migratorio

Por CLAUDIA TORRENS, Associated Press

NUEVA YORK, 23 de enero del 2014 (AP): Más de medio millón de empresas en Estados Unidos usan E-Verify, el sistema del gobierno que permite a las compañías comprobar el estatus migratorio de sus empleados y candidatos a ser empleados.

Los Servicios de Inmigración y Ciudadanía e s ta d o u n i d e n s e s anunciaron el jueves que desde su lanzamiento en 1996 el sistema ha experimentado un crecimiento significativo, pasando de 11.474 inscripciones en el año fiscal 1996 a 111.671 en el año fiscal 2012.

E-Verify ha sido criticado en el pasado, con acusaciones de estar plagado de errores y no ser confiable. El gobierno dijo el jueves que ha trabajado para fortalecer la integridad del sistema y que durante el año fiscal 2013 las empresas usaron E-Verify más de 25 millones de veces.

A pesar de que el sistema es voluntario, 20 estados han aprobado leyes que obligan a todos o a ciertos empleadores a usar E-Verify, mientras que California e Illinois han limitado su uso, según estadísticas del National Immigration Law Center, una organización sin ánimo de lucro con sede en Los Ángeles.

El gobierno señaló también que ha llegado a acuerdos con los departamentos de vehículos de ciertos estados para garantizar la autenticidad de las licencias de conducir que son usadas como documentos de identidad. También participa en un programa que combate el fraude mediante el bloqueo de números de la seguridad social que parecen falsos.

Un proyecto de ley aprobado en el Senado en junio del año pasado y que ofrecía un camino a la ciudadanía de aproximadamente millones de inmigrantes no autorizados en el país proponía fortalecer E-Verify hacerlo obligatorio de forma paulatina en un periodo de cinco años. Empresas con más de 5.000 empleados tendrían que usar el sistema al cabo de dos años mientras que compañías más pequeñas tendrían más tiempo. La propuesta no ha sido aprobada por la cámara

El congresista Lamar Smith, republicano de Texas, propuso que E-Verify fuera obligatorio a lo largo del país pero su proyecto de ley no ha sido aprobado aún por la cámara baja o el Senado.

Sólo la reforma migratoria puede frenar la contratación inmigrantes autorizados", opinó Emily Tulli, abogada para el National Immigration Law Center, "Cuando se obliga a los empleadores a usar E-Verify, como hacen algunos estados, y hay una población autorizada, se anima a esos empleadores a pagar a trabajadores fuera de nómina y a entrar en una economía sumergida. Sin una reforma no hay solución para esos empleadores trabajadores".

Lori Scialabba, directora provisional de los Servicios de Immigración y Ciudadanía, dijo en un comunicado el jueves que E-Verify ha tenido un crecimiento "exponencial, de mayor precisión y altas puntuaciones en satisfacción al cliente".

"Participar en E-Verify es en gran parte voluntario, por lo que el hecho de que medio millón de empresas se hayan inscrito demuestra confianza significativa en el programa", señaló.

WSU: "Understanding the Impact of Poverty on Education" Conference, Feb. 5-7

Poverty is a continuing crisis affecting many lives each year. It particularly impacts children, the way they learn and the decisions families make regarding education. Data shows that poverty affects over eight million children nationally, including 25 percent of Michigan children — over 50 percent of whom live in Detroit.

To explore what can be done to mitigate the impact of poverty on learning, the College of Education at Wayne State University will host its third annual conference, "Understanding the Impact of Poverty on Education: Research Symposium and Educational Dialogue" Feb. 5-7, 2014, at the McGregor Memorial Conference Center on the university's main campus.

This year's conference will feature a strong community presence. More than 15 local, regional and national nonprofit organizations have partnered with the college to engage with educators from Michigan, Ohio, North Carolina, Texas, Canada, Ghana, and Indonesia. These scholars from around the world will deliver presentations on best practices in working with impoverished and homeless children to encourage academic success, share classroom strategies for better psychological understanding of the trauma of poverty, and much more.

The conference kicks off Feb. 5 with a free reception and keynote speech that is open to the community.

Michael Dantley, professor and dean at the School of Education of Loyola University Chicago, will deliver a keynote address, "We Are They and They Are We: The Personal Praxis of Prob-Poverty. ing Dantley has more than 20 years of experience higher education, including academic appointments in the School of Education, Health and Society at Miami University. The event will also include a poetry performance by Kinetic Affect, a Michiganbased duo who combined their diverse pasts and powerful voices to create an entirely new spoken word poetry experience.

Prior to the opening reception and keynote speech, registered guests will have an opportunity to attend a pre-conference poverty simulation workshop coordinated by the Steinbruck Center for Urban Studies in Washington, D.C. The workshop is designed enlighten participants regarding the perpetuation of stereotypes and misinformation about the homeless and people living in poverty.

Ingrid J. Guerra-López, associate professor and director of the Institute for Learning and Performance Improvement in the College of Education, will share her personal experiences with poverty — particularly as an immigrant and daughter of a single mother struggling to learn a new culture and language - and the impact it has had on her life and career. Guerra-López was born in Ecuador and moved to Los Angeles when she was 11. By the time she was 13, she had moved several times and attended eight schools before finding stability in Miami. Carolyn Shields, dean of the College of Education, will take on the issues of poverty from a social justice perspective in her presentation, "America's Longest War Can Be Won." Kurt Metzger, director emeritus of Data Driven Detroit, will share demographic data and trends that impact the Detroit community.

Registration for the full three-day conference is $180. Registration is $100 for a single day. Disfor a single day. Disfor a single day become dates are available for community partners, members of nonprofit organizations, students, and Wayne State faculty and Wayne State faculty and to register, visit www.coe.wayne.edu/poverty.

Michigan seeks visas to lure immigrants to Detroit

the U.S. if it's in the "national interest."

Snyder wants to broaden the definition of national interest to apply it to Detroit, likening the concept toone already in place where foreign-born physicians can get a green card after working in an underserved area for five years.

One critic of Snyder's proposal said it appears to dismiss immigrants who have not achieved high levels of education. Even if it does not take a specific job away from native-born job-seekers, itmakes immigrants "more marketable than educated currentresidents," said the Rev. Horace Sheffield III, executive director of the Detroit Association of Black Organizations.

Organizations. "What does that do to displace people who are born here and who don't have the education and are already competing for scarce jobs?" Sheffield said. "The other problem is the governor only picked educated immigrants. That only pits immigrants against immigrants."

About 1 in 5 Detroit residents are without a high school diploma, according to Detroit Future City, a 2012 report that examined how the city can remake itself.

Another 35 percent have diplomas, but no other kind of training. And for every 100 residents, there are only 27 jobs, the study found.

Under Snyder's plan, Detroit would be allocated 5,000 visas in the first year, 10,000 each of the next three years and 15,000 in the fifth year. Snyder is especially keen on keeping foreign students in Michigan, many of whom come to the state to earn advanced degrees in science, technology, engineering or math, then leave.

In his annual State of the State address last week, he announced a plan to join two other states in putting immigration services under a special office, as well as a separate initiative to make Michigan the second state to run a regional visa program to attract immigrant investors for development projects. Frank Venegas is chief

Hispanic Roundtable reception reveals results from Convención Hispana 2013

By Kevin Milliken, La Prensa Correspondent

The Cleveland-based Hispanic Roundtable celebrated its recent successes from Convención Hispana 2013 held Oct. 19—and announced some new initiatives during a reception that drew 60 attendees on Thursday, Jan. 23, 2014 at the Battery Park Wine Bar, 7524 Father Frascati Ave., Cleveland.

"That's evidence of the commitment our volunteers have. This was a night where wind chill was below zero and it snowed," said José Feliciano, a Cleveland attorney and Hispanic Roundtable president. "I was encouraged and very pleased by the turn-

Mr. Feliciano explained that Convención Hispana is geared to move the Latino community forward in the areas of "empowerment, education, and economic development," and as illustrated in press materials furnished by Co-Chair Magda Gómez of Tri-C.

Voting

He stated the group's mission going forward is to "defend and advocate for the bilingual ballot' in Cuvahoga County Α consent decree ends in March, so the plans of Hispanic Roundtable are to lobby the county's board of elections to continue to use such a ballot during the May primary and 2014 November general election. The group also will continue a massive voter education and registration drive.

"We have forcefully advocated with the board of elections, the Justice Dept. [DOJ], and the U.S. Attorney's Office that it is absolutely critical that we keep that," said Feliciano. "We led that effort before, leading it now and hopeful everyone will do the right thing on that."

On the election front, the Hispanic Roundtable fought off an effort to break up a predominantly Latino city council ward during a redistricting process last year. Feliciano stated the group threatened to go to the DOJ, alleging a violation of the federal Voting Rights Act with the way maps were redrawn. Ward 43 remains a largely Latino-based city council district, "although not a majority," he said.

The goals for improving the educational attainment rates of young Latinos are lofty-but the Hispanic Roundtable president called them crucial nonetheless.

'We really need to work hard to get our graduation rate up to 75 percent and double the number of kids in the Cleveland Public Schools [CMSD] who are going on to college.

ing that may become available. Every public university is being pressured to have at least one Latino on its board of

The Hispanic Roundtable also will continue to push the agenda for comprehensive immigration reform and pressure Northeast Ohio officials to address health disparities within the Latino community.

Health

One of the bright spots to emerge from last fall's Convención Hispana were the number of free screenings offered at the event's Community Resources and Health Fair. which included 100 organizations. Latinos received 24 mammograms, 5 sickle cell screenings, 40 HIV screenings, and 150 flu shots. There were 8 blood donors (Red Cross) of Convención Hispana has been selected to receive the 2014 Minority Health Community Action Leadership Award from the Ohio Commission on Minority Health for such efforts.

Roundtable president said the group will "advocate that every public company use the Rooney Rule." Taken from the National Football League policy for interviewing minority head coaching candidates, the organization is pushing for company leaders to interview at least Latino for any chief executive or board open-hosted an immigration debate moderated by Michael K. McIntyre from the Plain Dealer. The debate was between Rep. Bill Patmon (D-10) and Rep. Matt Lynch (R-Bainbridge).

Immigration Reform Convención

While the Hispanic Roundtable president is pleased to see the community rally around the cause of Ricardo Ramos in an effort to keep the Lake County father of three from being deported to México, the attorney called comprehensive immigration reform "more complicated than that" on a number of levels. But he did call the Ramos situation "a human tragedy.

"First, there's how many people you let in at the top, the middle, and the bottom," said Feliciano. "Secondly, you have to deal with the 11 or 12 million people who are here. So the reform has to be comprehensive. It is an enormous policy question. It is an enormous economic development question. It is an enormous political question."

The Cleveland attorney stated he is "cautiously optimistic" that "there will be progress" in US Congress on immigration reform yet this year, which happens to be a midterm election for most incumbents in the House of Representatives. The growing number of Latino voters certainly got the attention of both major political parties during the 2012 election cycle. Feliciano underscored that his group and others "will need to keep it a top agenda item for the Hispanic community in America."

Hispana Co-Chair Magda Gómez of Tri-C.

Education

The situation seems to be improving for some Latinos in Metro Cleveland-including a recently-announced agreement to increase the number Latino students attending STEM (science, technology, engineering, and math) programs in the Cleveland Metropolitan School District (CMSD). The agreement between the school district and the Office of Civil Rights within the federal Dept. of Education requires district officials to track the number of Latino students in those programs and make specific efforts to encourage Latino students to use the district's specialized STEM programs.

"We are in complete accord with that," said Feliciano. "This new superintendent-I have a very high opinion of him. The system as a whole, I think the message was right. I was delighted that the (Office of Civil Rights) came out with

The Northeast-Ohio Latino education advocacy group Esperanza, Inc. helped challenge the status quo on STEM education in Cleveland. However, the Hispanic Roundtable Convención Hispanato improve the college readiness of Latino students. More than 100 high school students attended college workshops put on by staff from Cuyahoga Community College (Tri-C) and Kent State Univer-

An essay contest also was held for high school seniors and undergraduate college students, inviting them to submit a 300-word composition on the topic: "I am Latino, Iam American. The top three finalists won prizes of up to $1,000, read their inspiring stories at the Convención. and were photographed with the gathering's keynote speaker, San Antonio Mayor Julian Castro.

Overall, Convención Hispana is a one-day community organizing event that also sets the stage for a three-year process of moving various initiatives forward. At each Convención, four committees put together goals and objectives in their respective areas that will be accomplished prior to the next Convención Hispana

The 2013 Convención was attended by about 2,500 people, big enough that organizers may look to make it more than a one-day event in 2016 and invite participants from across northern Ohio.

"It is a process. The Convención is not an end in itself; if anything, it is a platform for us to work on these issues-the agenda-setting. We work on these goals and three years from now, we report back and see how we're doing," explained Feliciano. "The volunteers are the ones who do it."

Ohio whistleblower ruling raising concerns

COLUMBUS, Jan. 19, 2014 (AP): A little-noticed Ohio appeals court ruling could have sweeping effects on state employees seeking to report noncriminal misconduct in government to the state's watchdog.

In a ruling Dec. 30, 2013, the Franklin County Court of Appeals ruled that the deeds reported to the Ohio Inspector General must be criminal in order for whistleblower protections provided under state law to apply.

The Columbus Dis-

The Columbus Dispatch reports (http://bit.ly/ IlVpBsd) the decision has the 33,000-member Ohio Civil Service Employees Association and Republican state auditor calling for clarifications to the law.

"It sends the wrong message to state employees that their voice doesn't count, that now they can be retaliated against when they speak out about unsafe equipment or contractor violations or incompetent managers," OCSEA spokeswoman Sally Meckling told the newspaper.

Meckling said the ruling requires non-lawyers to make a legal determination as to what's criminal and what's not. "And if they are wrong, they could be punished."

The long-running dispute involves now-retired Ohio Bureau of Workers' Compensation lawyer Joe Sommer. Sommer's initial complaint involved a reprimand letter he received in 2009 that he alleged represented retaliation for bringing to the Inspector General's attention violations of state law associated with the nomination process to the Ohio Industrial Commission.

"This lack of protection is against the public interest because many state employees will be too scared of possible retaliation and harassment to report wrongdoing in state government," Sommer said.

The appellate judges said in their 3-0 decision said Ohio employees have other avenues for reporting noncriminal activity that state whistleblower laws do protect, such as going to supervisors or to the state internal audit office.

The Ohio Attorney General's office told the newspaper an unusual set of facts were in play and the case didn't set any "groundbreaking" precedent.

Sommer had appealed his reprimand as a violation of whistleblower protections first to the State Personnel Board of Review, then to the Franklin County Common Pleas Court. He lost in both venues and appealed.

The other two venues didn't determine that Sommer was not protected by whistleblower laws, the newspaper reported, but that he was reprimanded outside those protections for giving the false impression that he was speaking on behalf of the Workers' Compensation Bureau or its legal department.

The appellate court ruled that Sommer's arguments were moot because he was not protected by whistleblower laws, an issue that had not previously been raised by either side in the case.

Ohio Auditor Dave Yost called the appellate court's ruling "technically correct," but in terms of public policy he said it's "180 degrees wrong."

Yost, alawyer and former prosecutor, pledged to speak to state lawmakers about a potential fix to whistleblower laws so that state workers "won't feel their jobs are on the line."

Ohio's current inspector general, Randall Meyer, declined comment.

State legislators stationed a deputy inspector general at the Bureau of Workers' Compensation after it was rocked by a sweeping state investment scandal in the mid-2000s. Sommer questioned the purpose of the office if employees who report misdeeds there aren't protected.
