Airbnb llega a Cuba, en importante expansión empresarial

Por MICHAEL WEISSENSTEIN, Associated Press

LA HABANA, 2 IV 15 (AP): El popular servicio en línea Airbnb para renta de viviendas entre particulares permitirá a los viajeros estadounidenses reservar alojamiento en Cuba a partir del jueves, la expansión empresarial más significativa de Estados Unidos en la isla desde que a fines del año pasado se anunció que ambos países reanudarían sus relaciones.

El ciberbitio y la aplicación para dispositivos móviles permiten a los usuarios reservar alojamiento entre particulares, entre casi un millón de opciones a nivel mundial que van desde cuartos en apartamentos hasta casas completas.

Durante medio siglo, el embargo comercial ordenado por Washington ha impedido que ese tipo de negocios ingresen al mercado cubano, pero en enero, el gobierno del presidente Barack Obama relajó una serie de restricciones sobre empresas estadounidenses con el fin de alentar el crecimiento del pequeño sector privado de la isla.

Las búsquedas que hagan los usuarios de Airbnb sobre Cuba ahora presentarán más de 1.000 propiedades en diversas partes de la isla, el 40% de ellas en La Habana y el resto en destinos turísticos tales como Cienfuegos, ubicada a unas horas de distancia en la costa sur. La compañía lleva tres meses enviando equipos de representantes a Cuba para que firmen contratos con propietarios de casas y tiene planes para seguirse expandiendo en los próximos meses.

“Creemos que Cuba podría convertirse en uno de los mercados más grandes de Airbnb en Latinoamérica”, dijo Kay Kuehne, director regional de la empresa. “De hecho, estamos enchufándonos a una cultura de microempresas que ya existe en Cuba. Los anfitriones en Cuba llevan décadas haciendo lo que acabamos de empezar a hacer hace siete años”. Uno de los elementos más desarrollados e importantes del sector empresarial de la isla es una red de miles de habitaciones y casas para turistas de propiedad privada. Luego de la crisis económica de la década de 1990 tras la desaparición de la Unión Soviética, dicha red comenzó como una alternativa hogareña a los hoteles operados por el Estado, que en general son lúgubres. Estas llamadas “casas particulares”, al estilo de los hostales que incluyen desayuno, se han expandido hasta convertirse en un sector económico con opciones que van desde pequeños apartamentos en el centro de La Habana hasta casas de playa con múltiples habitaciones y elegante servicio de alimentos y camareras.

El anuncio de Airbnb es el más reciente de una serie de iniciativas empresariales estadounidenses para ingresar a Cuba. En febrero, la IDT Corp., con sede en Nueva Jersey y la firma estatal de telecomunicaciones cubana ETECSA acordaron conectar las llamadas telefónicas de Estados Unidos directamente al país caribeño. Anteriormente eran trianguladas a través de otros países como Italia y España.

Netflix y MasterCard también han desbloqueado sus servicios en Cuba, pero sólo un puñado de isleños tienen conexiones lo suficientemente rápidas como para bajar el contenido de Netflix y la mayoría de las empresas de tarjetas de crédito aún prohíben las transacciones desde Cuba, lo que hace que la medida de MasterCard sea en esencia simbólica.

Las acciones emprendidas por Airbnb podrían ser el desarrollo más significativo en términos de hacer que el dinero llegue a los bolsillos de los empresarios en la isla e impulsarlos dentro de una economía estancada manejada por el Estado, una de las metas más importantes detrás de la decisión de Obama de mejorar las relaciones con Cuba.

“Pensamos que eso va a facilitar que el negocio prospere, en definitiva mejor. No sólo nuestro negocio de cuentapropista, sino todo”, dijo Israel Rivero, que es dueño de un apartamento renovado en forma inmaculada en el centro de La Habana. Cobra 25 dólares la noche por habitación, pero el precio subirá a 30 en Airbnb para cubrir las cuotas y los costos por canje de divisas.

Kuehne dijo que las autoridades cubanas y estadounidenses recibieron con beneplácito los planes de Airbnb. Desde que se anunció el restablecimiento de relaciones, Cuba ha pasado apuros para dar alojamiento a los viajeros, cuyo número ha aumentado. Las visitas a la isla se han incrementado casi 20% en los últimos meses, la mayoría de turistas no estadounidenses y muchos hoteles están totalmente reservados, en especial los pocos que tienen la capacidad de ofrecer un servicio cercano a los estándares internacionales.

“La expansión de Airbnb en Cuba representa la primera acción por parte de una empresa estadounidense importante para abarcar completamente el tamaño de oportunidades que representan tanto nuestra nueva política hacia Cuba como el pujante sector empresarial de la isla”, dijo Ric Herrero, director general de CubaNow, un grupo cubano-estadounidense que aboga por tener lazos más cercanos entre los dos países.

Por el momento, los viajeros no estadounidenses no podrán usar Airbnb para hacer reservaciones en Cuba. Debido a que persisten las restricciones impuestas por el embargo de Washington, la lista de las viviendas disponibles en la isla sólo estará al alcance de turistas

Exclusive: Airbnb to Cuba in major US business expansion

By MICHAEL WEISSENSTEIN, Associated Press

HAVANA, April 2, 2015 (AP): The popular online home-rental service Airbnb is allowing US-American travelers to book lodging in Cuba starting Thursday in the most significant U.S. business expansion on the island since the declaration of detente between the two countries late last year.

For a half-century, the U.S. trade embargo had blocked such businesses from entering the Cuban market. In January, however, the Obama administration loosened a series of restrictions on U.S. business in an attempt to encourage the growth of the island's small private sector.

Airbnb searches for “Cuba” now turn up more than 1,000 properties across the island, with 40 percent in Havana and the rest in tourist destinations such as Cienfuegos a few hours away on the southern coast. The company has been sending teams of representatives to Cuba for three months to sign up home owners, and plans to expand steadily in coming months.

“We believe that Cuba could become one of Airbnb's biggest markets in Latin America,” said Kay Kuehne, regional director for Airbnb, the website and mobile app that allows users to book rooms in more than 1 million private homes around the world. “We are actually plugging into an existing culture of micro-enterprise in Cuba. The hosts in Cuba have been doing for decades what we just started doing seven years ago.”

One of the most developed and important elements of Cuba's entrepreneurial sector is a network of thousands of privately owned rooms and houses for tourists. Starting in the post-Soviet economic crisis of the 1990s as home, bed and breakfast-style alternatives to Cuba's generally grim state-run hotels, “casas particulares,” or private homes, have expanded into an industry with options ranging from small apartments in central Havana to multi-room beach houses with top-notch food and maid service.

The Airbnb announcement is the latest in a series of U.S. business moves into Cuba. In February, New Jersey-based IDT Corp. and Cuban state telecoms firm ETECSA agreed to connect phone calls from the United States directly to Cuba. Previously, they were routed through third countries such as Italy and Spain.

Netflix and MasterCard have also unblocked their services in Cuba, but only a handful of islanders have connections fast enough to stream Netflix, and most credit-card issuers still prohibit transactions from Cuba, making MasterCard's move largely symbolic so far.

The Airbnb move could be the most significant development in terms of putting money in the pockets of entrepreneurs across the island and bolstering them in a stagnant state-run economy — leading goals for the Obama administration in warming relations with Cuba.

“I think this is going to help our business prosper, to definitely improve, not just private business, but everything here,” said Israel Rivero, who owns an immaculately renovated, pre-war apartment in central Havana. He charges $25 a night per room, but the price will go to $30 on Airbnb to cover fees and currency exchange costs.

Kuehne said Airbnb's plans had been welcomed by Cuban authorities.

Asked about the expansion, the U.S. State Department said Thursday that “we applaud efforts to help the Cuban people, including the nascent private sector, take advantage of new opportunities to move Cuba towards greater openness and prosperity.”

Cuba has been wrestling with how to accommodate a surge of travelers since the announcement of detente. Trips to the island have been up nearly 20 percent in recent

EEUU: revisión de lista de países terroristas en fase final

Por LUIS ALONSO LUGO, Associated Press

WASHINGTON, DC, 7IV 15 (AP): La revisión que el gobierno estadounidense realiza sobre la inclusión de Cuba en la lista de Estados que patrocinan el terrorismo está en su fase final, dijo el martes un funcionario de la Casa Blanca.

Así lo indicó Ben Rhodes, asesor presidencial sobre Seguridad Nacional, durante una conferencia telefónica sobre el próximo viaje del presidente Barack Obama a Jamaica y Panamá.

Agregó que están a la espera de que el Departamento de Estado remita a la Casa Blanca su recomendación final.

Obama dijo el martes durante una entrevista concedida a NPR que podrá tomar una decisión tan pronto reciba la recomendación del Departamento de Estado.

Una vez que Obama adopte una decisión deberá notificarla al Congreso.

Obama ordenó la revisión al anunciar en diciembre que buscaría reanudar las relaciones diplomáticas con la isla tras una pausa de medio siglo.

Rhodes también descartó que Washington y La Habana vayan a anunciar antes de la Cumbre de las Américas, prevista para el 10 y 11 de abril, la apertura de sus respectivas embajadas.

Ricardo Zúñiga, asesor presidencial para asuntos hemisféricos, dio por descontado que Obama tendrá la oportunidad de conversar con el presidente cubano Raúl Castro durante la cumbre aunque sólo tiene prevista una reunión bilateral formal con el mandatario panameño Juan Carlos Varela.

“No podemos anticipar

exactamente cómo será la interacción, pero seguramente podrán platicar sobre un proceso que lleva un tiempo necesario para tratar temas que nos han separado por 50 años”, dijo Zúñiga. “Estamos satisfechos porque va como debe ser, con seriedad y eficacia. Hemos tenido un ritmo importante no sólo en cuanto a la normalización, sino en cuanto a telecomunicaciones, derechos humanos y aviación civil”.

Durante las tres rondas de negociaciones celebradas por Estados Unidos y Cuba para restaurar plenamente sus relaciones diplomáticas, la principal demanda de la delegación cubana ha sido que se excluya al país de la lista de naciones que apoyan a organizaciones terroristas.

Además de Cuba, la lista actualmente incluye a Irán, Siria y Sudán.

Juez mantiene suspensión sobre medidas migratorias de Obama

Por JUAN A. LOZANO

HOUSTON, 8IV 15 (AP): Un juez federal en Texas mantuvo el martes la suspensión temporal que pesa sobre las órdenes ejecutivas de inmigración del presidente Barack Obama, que impedirían la deportación de millones de inmigrantes, rechazando una petición del Departamento de Justicia de Estados Unidos que habría hecho que el plan siguiera adelante.

El juez de Distrito de Estados Unidos Andrew Hanen rechazó suspender su decisión del 16 de febrero que atendió una petición realizada por 26 estados contrarios a la iniciativa de Obama.

El último fallo de Hanen confirma el statu quo, es decir, que el gobierno de Obama tiene prohibido temporalmente permitir que hasta cinco millones de personas que viven de forma irregular se queden en el país.

El Departamento de Justicia apeló a un tribunal superior, la Corte de Apelaciones del Quinto Circuito de Nueva Orleans, para retirar la medida dictada por Hanen. Está previsto que la vista para escuchar los argumentos de ambas partes al respecto se celebre el 17 de abril.

En su fallo del martes negando la petición de Washington, Hanen dijo que el gobierno no había "mostrado ninguna razón creíble por la que esta Directiva necesite una aplicación inmediata".

La Casa Blanca no realizó comentarios de inmediato.

La coalición de 26 estados presentó una demanda para revertir las medidas migratorias de Obama, que buscar frenar la deportación de unos cinco millones de personas que viven ilegalmente en el país. Los gobiernos regionales, encabezados por el Texas, sostienen que la acción ejecutiva del presidente es inconstitucional y les obliga a invertir más en seguridad, sanidad y educación. La orden preliminar pretende frenar las acciones de Washington mientras la demanda es estudiada en los tribunales.

Abogados del Departamento de Justicia sostienen que mantener esa suspensión temporal daña "el interés del público y de terceras partes que se verán privadas de significativos beneficios de seguridad y humanitarios con la pronta implementación" del plan migratorio del presidente.

Obama anunció sus órdenes ejecutivas en noviembre, diciendo que la falta de acción del Congreso le obligó a hacer importantes cambios en las leyes migratorias por su cuenta.

Antes de pronunciarse sobre la suspensión, Hanen dijo que primero quería escuchar de los fiscales federales las acusaciones de que el gobierno estadounidense lo engañó sobre la aplicación de parte del plan migratorio.

Estaba previsto que la primera de las órdenes de Obama—para ampliar el programa que protege a los inmigrantes jóvenes de la deportación si entraron al país ilegalmente cuando eran niños—entrara en vigor el 18 de febrero. La otra parte importante del plan ampliaría la protección de padres de ciudadanos estadounidenses y residentes permanentes que lleven varios años en el país ante una expulsión. La aplicación de esta comenzaría el 19 de mayo.

Hanen emitió su primer fallo creyendo que ninguna de estas normas había entrado en vigor. Aproximadamente un mes más tarde, el Departamento de Justicia confirmó que más de 108.000 personas habían recibido aplazamientos de tres años en sus deportaciones y permisos de trabajo, pero los abogados del departamento insistieron en que estas medidas estaban amparadas por las directrices de 2012 que no fueron bloqueadas por la suspensión. Justicia se disculpó por la confusión, pero Hanen no pareció convencido durante una vista celebrada el mes pasado y amenazó con sancionar a los letrados.

En su veredicto del martes escribió que aunque el gobierno federal había "engañado" sobre el tema, no aplicará sanciones inmediatas contra el ejecutivo, apuntando que esa medida no sería "en interés de la justicia o en el mejor interés de este país" porque se trata de un tema que repercusión nacional y el resultado podría afectar a millones de personas.

"Los argumentos de las partes deberían decidirse por méritos relativos a la ley, no verse empañados por acusaciones externas que podrían o no descansar en el fin último de esta demanda", escribió Hanen.

En una orden separada,

Hanen dijo al gobierno que tiene hasta el 21 de abril para presentar ante el tribunal y los demandantes información detallada de su anuncio de marzo sobre las 108.000 prórrogas de tres años.

El magistrado pide al ejecutivo que proporcione "todos y cada uno de los borradores" del anuncio, incluyendo información sobre cuándo se escribieron, editaron o revisaron. Hanen también solicitó una lista con el nombre de todas las personas que conocían la existencia de ese aviso.

Panamá en 1826 y 2015, una historia que se repite

Por JOSHUA GOODMAN y JACOBO GARCIA, Associated Press

PANAMA, 8IV 15 (AP): Cuando este viernes se inaugure la Cumbre de las Américas en Panamá se revivirá el famoso "Congreso Anfictiónico" convocado por Simón Bolívar en 1826 y al que acudieron Estados Unidos y diez países latinoamericanos.

Muchas cosas han cambiado desde entonces y es poco probable que las delegaciones lleguen en barco o se enfermen de fiebre amarilla. Sin embargo, a pesar de los 189 años transcurridos algunos temas siguen sobre la mesa.

En aquella ocasión el primero de los puntos tratados fue obligar a la potencia dominante, España, a que reconociera el daño causado en América; una crítica similar a la que hoy recibe Estados Unidos de parte de los gobiernos de izquierda del continente.

En 1826 los países convocados también en Panamá buscaron sin éxito actuar unidos para lograr la independencia de Cuba y Puerto Rico. Cuba, que asiste por primera vez a la Cumbre de las Américas, volverá a ser tema central en los debates del viernes y sábado.

En la reunión convocada por Bolívar los países latinoamericanos pretendían definir las fronteras, establecer acuerdos comerciales y crear un ejército conjunto. La lista de asuntos a tratar también incluía la abolición de la esclavitud, que tanto preocupaba a Bolívar y que no fue de agrado de los estados sureños de Estados Unidos ni de Brasil.

Aquel congreso duró tres semanas y estuvieron presentes la Gran Colombia (Panamá, Colombia, Venezuela y Ecuador), Perú, las Provincias Unidas del Centro América (Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua y Costa Rica) y México.

"Hoy Panamá vuelve a servir de puente para fijar las pautas de las relaciones entre los pueblos americanos y los demás pueblos del mundo", dijo el anfitrión de la próxima cumbre, el presidente panameño Juan Carlos Varela.

Estados Unidos fue invitado a último momento al "Congreso Anfictiónico" y por mediación de México, porque Bolívar desconfiaba de la ambición norteamericana de extenderse por América.

"De hecho, ambos (presidentes de Estados Unidos Thomas Jefferson y John Quincy Adams) dijeron claramente —en correspondencia pública y privada— que la América española finalmente sería propiedad de los Estados Unidos", aseguró la periodista y escritora Marie Arana, autora del libro "Bolívar: Libertador de América".

Los resultados prácticos de aquella convocatoria fueron casi nulos. La firma de los llamados protocolos del istmo "fueron sólo una sombra" de lo que se pretendía, resumió Bolívar, ya que la mayoría de los países optaron por acuerdos individuales y las rivalidades terminaron en guerras poco después.

El calor tropical y las dificultades para movilizarse hicieron el resto. Varios delegados enfermaron, un enviado estadounidense murió de fiebre amarilla en el camino y otro llegó varias semanas después de que terminaran la cumbre.

DPS kicks off new “See It Believe It Week” with blockbuster set of events, culminating in first-ever STEM-themed Open Doors Day, April 18

Detroit Public Schools (DPS) on Monday, April 13 kicked off a new “See It Believe It Week” with a blockbuster set of events, culminating in the district’s first-ever STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) themed Open Doors Day on Saturday, April 18, 2015 and a special invitation to Detroit families to visit the Detroit Children’s Museum free of charge.

The series of events seek to invite parents who have not yet selected a school to tour any DPS school after-school on Wednesday, April 15 or from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, April 18. Families looking to enroll their children in Pre-Kindergarten can also do so at the school sites. In addition, parents of currently-enrolled students are encouraged to visit their child’s school on Saturday for valuable enrollment information for the upcoming school year.

See It Believe It Week launches Monday with Pre-K-to-K transition events, in which DPS elementary schools begin having their Pre-Kindergarten students engaged in daily transition activities with Kindergarten classrooms. This will include reading circles, math lessons, lunch and more. The itineraries have been coordinated by Early Childhood teachers.

On Wednesday, all schools showcase their academic offerings and college/career-track programs to perspective families during after-school Open Houses at every school. Times will vary depending on the end of the school day at each school. Go to detroit12.org/schools to see a complete list of schools.

On Saturday, the district hosts its first-ever STEM-themed Open Doors Day, in conjunction with the district’s Office of Science. Schools have each designed creative itineraries to showcase their individual STEM offerings.

MoonDestroyers and create Oobleck.

• Ronald Brown Academy: The theme is “Up, Up and Away.” Hands-on activities will include rocket pinwheels, antacid table races, pop can heros, paper rockets and more.

• Chrysler Elementary: The school will hold a robot parade and have hands-on chemistry demonstrations by the chemistry club.

• Gardner Elementary: STEM activities will include a K’nex building station, and projects with dinosaur fossils, mealworms and magnets.

• Burton International Academy: Activities include tabletop hovercrafts, elephant’s toothpaste, blobs in a bottle, “make your own slime,” and weather tool creations.

Saturday also marks a rare opportunity for Detroit families whose children are not enrolled in Detroit Public Schools to visit the Detroit Children’s Museum free of charge. Families will have the opportunity to:

- Learn how to make a terrarium, a bird house, and how to “Re-Grow Kitchen Scraps;”
- Create Bug Buttons;
- Invent a nutritious smoothie;
- Hear about classes and programs offered by Keep Growing Detroit.

Families and their children also will be able to explore the gallery and learn about some of the museum’s nearly 2 million historical artifacts, take in a Planetarium show, and experiment in the museum’s Sound and Music Room. Federal funding currently mandates that the Detroit Children’s Museum is only open to DPS’ Title I families, however the museum is open to the public on April 18 thanks to a sponsorship by Lawrence Technological University.

As a special offering, parents and guardians also will be able to learn about opportunities this summer at DPS’ Camp Burt Shurly, a Title I-funded Summer Camp Program located in Gregory, Michigan for Detroit Public Schools’ students. The event will showcase a portable climbing wall, archery, and field games in the Children’s Museum parking lot, and DPS parents who have children between the ages of 8-12 will be able to register their children for a free week of camp.

The Detroit Children’s Museum, located at 6134 Second Avenue, will be open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

See It Believe It Week concludes with the opening of the annual Detroit Public Schools Student Exhibition, featuring hundreds of imaginative works created by Detroit Public Schools students in grades K-12, ranging from paintings, prints, drawings, photography, ceramics, videos, jewelry and more.

The exhibition kicks off Saturday, April 18 and will run through May 31, 2015 at the Detroit Public Library - Main Branch. The Detroit Public Library is located at 5201 Woodward Ave., across the street from the DIA. Admission to the library is free.

The 78th Detroit Public Schools Student Exhibition was organized by the Detroit Institute of Arts and Detroit Public Schools and is made possible with support from the Ruth T. T. Cattell Education Endowment Fund. Additional support was provided by the Detroit Public Schools Foundation.

Caravana 43 recorre las ciudades de Michigan en busca de apoyo

Por: Isabel Flores, Corresponsal La Prensa

Detroit, MI.-Luego de haber recorrido las ciudades de Grand Rapids, Lansing, Ann Arbor y Detroit, la Caravana 43 deja Michigan para dirigirse a Columbus, Ohio, en donde continuarán con su objetivo de difundir la desaparición de los 43 estudiantes de la Escuela Normal de Ayotzinapa el pasado 26 de septiembre del 2014 y la impunidad que existe en México. En el camino van sumando apoyo en este país y pidiendo se esclarezcan los hechos. La meta final en Estados Unidos: Reunirse en Nueva York con una comisión de las Naciones Unidas para exponer la forma cómo trabaja el gobierno de México.

María De Jesús Kalempo, madre del joven José Eduardo Bartolo y Cruz Bautista Salvador, tío del joven desaparecido Bejamín Ascencio Bautista llegaron a Grand Rapids el pasado 7 de abril en donde fueron muy bien recibidos por la comunidad. “En representación de todos los padres de familia, estamos aquí para pedir su apoyo porque queremos se aclare lo que ocurrió el 26 de septiembre, una fecha que cambió nuestras vidas”, dijo la María de Jesús.

“Somos gente sencilla, campesinos que vivimos en las afueras de la ciudad, en las comunidades, ahí se siembra el maíz, frijol, garbanzo. Nosotros como padres de familia enseñamos a nuestros hijos a trabajar al mismo tiempo a estudiar. Quién iba pensar que aquel día al enviarlos a la escuela, nuestros hijos iban a ser baleados. Es por eso que venimos a desmentir a nuestro gobierno porque ellos dicen que en México no pasa nada, pero la realidad es que pasan muchas cosas. Pedimos su apoyo porque con el dinero que llega a través del Plan Merida, se le paga a los militares, no se apoyo al pueblo”, agregó la madre de José Eduardo en la iglesia San Francisco

Xavier de Grand Rapids. Posteriormente, la comunidad de Michigan State University en East Lansing celebró un día más de la existencia de Benjamin Ascencio Bautista quien cumplió 20 años el pasado 10 de abril. En la Capital del Estado de Michigan en la oficina de la Senadora Debbie Stabenow y se reunieron con miembros de la Iglesia Cristo Rey. Durante la conferencia de prensa, el Alcalde de Lansing, se comprometió a aprobar una declaración en apoyo a la demanda por la justicia de los miembros de la Caravana 43 y enviarla al gobierno de México.

Otra de las ciudades que se solidarizó con la causa, fue Ann Arbor, quien dio la bienvenida con una coalición de estudiantes y maestros de la Universidad de Michigan y Eastern Michigan University, así como público en general. Ann Arbor tiene tradición por su activismo político y Caravana 43 fue un eslabón para unir más a la comunidad.

Finalmente, la Caravana 43 concluyó sus actividades en Detroit. En cada una de las ciudades sostuvieron reuniones comunitarias en diversas instituciones como iglesias, universidades y centros comunitarios. Además, de realizar marchas y ofrecer conferencias de prensa. En Detroit la conferencia se llevo a cabo en las afueras del Consulado de México. “Hemos ido a protestas a todos los Consulados para recordarles que el problema de Ayotzinapa sigue, es una forma de hacer presión. No estamos entablado dialogo con ellos, simplemente nos estamos manifestando”, informó Cruz Bautista Salvador.

Bautista agradeció todo el apoyo a las personas que se sumaron a este movimiento. “Queremos que todo mundo se entere de lo ocurrido. Llevamos más de seis meses sin tener respuesta del gobierno mexicano. No han hecho ninguna investigación exhaustiva para dar con el paradero de los estudiantes. Pedimos a la gente que hable con sus representantes aquí en Estados Unidos y presionen al gobierno de México para que se aclaren los hechos”.

Asimismo, el entrevistado denunció un mal manejo de información, ya que se han cambiado las versiones en varias ocasiones. Quien que se castigue a los culpables tanto materiales como intelectuales. Hasta el momento hay 104 personas detenidas pero ninguna ha dicho la ubicación de los estudiantes y ninguno ha sido procesado por el delito de desaparición forzada o secuestro de estado.

A pesar de que ha pasado tanto tiempo, los padres de familia confían en que sus hijos se encuentran con vida. “El gobierno dice que fueron calcinados en un basurero pero el informe tiene muchas irregularidades. En un principio presentaron 28 cuerpos pero las pruebas de ADN no coincidieron. Los estudiantes siguen con vida porque no hay pruebas contundentes que demuestren lo contrario. Hemos tenido indicios de vida, personas han reportado que los vieron en otros poblados y los celulares siguen funcionando. Tenemos registros de actividad en Whatsapp y Facebook desde los celulares de los muchachos. Por eso pedimos informes de la plataforma de comunicaciones pero nos quieren dar nada. Queremos saber quién está usando esos celulares”.

Cruz Bautista señaló que también existe un receptor de información con la grabación de la comunicación entre la policía municipal, estatal, federal y el ejército mexicano, pero el gobierno no ha querido darles acceso. Con esta visita se pretende hacer un eco a nivel internacional. La Caravana 43 de Estados Unidos está integrada por nueve padres, madres y familiares de los jóvenes desaparecidos, quienes viajaron en tres rutas: Pacífico, Central y Atlántico. La próxima semana se reunirán todos en Nueva York para concluir con el recorrido.

Cabe destacar que hay otro grupo de representantes en Europa, Latinoamérica y esta semana iniciaron la gira por Canadá.

Ceremony celebrates artistic life, legacy of José Martínez

By Kevin Milliken, La Prensa Correspondent

José (Joe) Martínez was remembered as a gentle soul, a man who painted away his troubles, and someone who tried to memorialize the Latino community through art.

About 250 people attended the long-awaited memorial that was called "Between the Soul & Spirits," a collaboration between the Sofia Quintero Art and Cultural Center (SQACC) and Bowling Green State University (BGSU).

"Joe and I were really good friends and I really miss him," Joe Balderas, interim SQACC executive director, told the crowd. "I still can't believe that he's gone. He was an important part of the Sofia Quintero Center, especially with the art program and the kids. He was a person who wasn't afraid to get his hands dirty."

The Saturday evening tribute started with performances at The Believe Center by Ballet Folklórico El Corazón de México dancers, who stepped to traditional, regional Mexican music in honor of the heritage Martínez celebrated with young people every day. The Toledo artist and community advocate was well-known for trying to teach painting to community kids.

BGSU graduate students honored Martínez's passion for his Chicano heritage with a presentation on the history of Carnival, assisted by the First Battalion of Indianapolis performance of the Carnival of Huejotzingo Puebla.

The BGSU students also gave a case study to commemorate the life of Joe Martínez, who was one of twelve children in a Mexican-American family that grew up in South Toledo. His parents had a big influence on his art at a young age—his mother making furniture from old cloth and cardboard. His father would carve wooden toys for his five brothers and six sisters for the holidays.

Martínez began drawing cartoons for his own young children while incarcerated after a twenty-five year period. He became a self-taught artist, learning to do portraits, chalk drawings, and paintings. He later became a member of OLA [Organization of Latino Artists].

Martínez became a Chicano rights activist, involved in the local chapter of the Brown Berets and encouraged young people to learn Chicano history. He combined his passion about Latino art and his heritage with lessons to younger generations.

The First Battalion of Indianapolis [1r Batallon de Indianapolis] is a group of Mexican communities in various cities of Indiana who celebrate the Carnival of Huejotzingo Puebla through colorful costumes and masks. The group is originally from Cholula, Puebla, and strives to preserve the Mexican region's unique heritage across the Midwest as well as promote cultural diversity.

The Carnival of Huejotzingo Puebla, one of the largest rural carnivals in Mexico, celebrates an 1862 victory over invading forces from the French Empire in the Battle of Puebla. The region is located in central Mexico between Mexico City and Veracruz.

The group then led a procession from The Believe Center to La Galeria de las Américas, 1224 Broadway, to what was renamed the José Martínez Memorial Galeria in the late artist's honor. The half-mile walk gave a colorful and cultural blend to a sunny evening that blessed the barrio that Martínez called home for 58 years.

A new galeria sign was unveiled, with an artist's rendering that included one of the signature hats with an artistic brim that Martínez was well-known for wearing. The sign also bears paintbrushes and wings of freedom. The sign also includes the SQACC logo.

"Heloved the Sofia Quintero Center for what it helped him to accomplish," said galeria owner Maria Rodríguez-Winter of her primo José, whose story about overcoming prison and adversity through art has inspired many people.

"These wings symbolize freedom and my brother is now free," said his sister Suzie Martínez to applause.

Amie Avelar, one of two children Martínez left behind with his untimely death last fall, stood beside the galeria sign, tears of joy streaming down her cheeks. His son José Martínez II lives in Nevada and was unable to attend the commemoration. "My dad always wanted this. It's just sad he isn't here in person for it," she said. "He's up in the sky and he's watching over us, but it's just sad he wasn't here for it. He worked very hard for his art, for the neighborhood, his family, everybody. I just miss him."

Now it is up to Ms. Avelar and her brother to help the seven Martínez grandchildren—Joe III, Felipe, Concepción (Chita), Selena, Emiliano, Monica, and Roberto III—to know their grandfather's life and legacy.

"I'm very proud of my father. He had a hard life, but he prevailed," she said. "He did it, he did his dream. He did what he wanted, on his terms."

While much of the artwork Martínez painted was on temporary display Saturday evening at The Believe Center, the collection will be moved to the art gallery that bears his name for permanent display.

Pastor Chaz D. Boes of Vida Church blessed the building and offered prayers for the community prior to the unveiling of a new sign for the art gallery. [Numerous members of Vida Church and the Colts football team were present, sporting their Vida and Colts shirts. The Colts are part of the STARS football league, which welcomes players 8-14 years that reside in South Toledo. Its head coach is Ben Martínez.]

"Lord, bless this house, for this truly is a galeria that You have ordained. You have set it apart to bring hope and inspiration," he said. "We know that Joe Martínez will be remembered, not just in this year, but for years to come, through this galeria. We ask that it will touch many generations to come."

Raúl Hector Castro, Arizona's first Latino governor, dies

Education was the best way out, 'Yankee Castro' determined...

By PAUL DAVENPORT and JONATHAN J. COOPER, Associated Press

April 10, 2015 (AP): Raül Hector Castro, Arizona's only Latino governor and an US-American ambassador to three countries, died Friday. He was 98.

Family spokesman James García said Castro died in his sleep in San Diego, where he was in hospice care.

Arizona Gov. Doug Ducey said Castro "lived a full life of exemplary service to Arizona and its people."

"He was an honorable public servant, a history-maker, a beloved family man and a strong friend and fighter for Arizona," Ducey said in a statement.

Castro was a self-made man, the embodiment of the US-American dream. He overcame poverty and discrimination to graduate from college and launch a successful career in politics and diplomacy.

"America is the land of opportunity," Castro told The Associated Press in 2010. "Here, one can accomplish whatever they want to be. But you've got to work for it."

Growing up on the U.S.-Mexico border near Douglas, Arizona, Castro saw discrimination around him. He said he wondered why the Latinos were laborers and none delivered the mail or worked in offices.

It didn't seem right that the Latino children had to walk miles to school every day while the white kids would wave from a passing school bus, he said.

He set out to beat the odds. When he couldn't get a job as a teacher—schools didn't hire educators of Mexican descent back then—he became a drifter for a while, working as a farm hand and boxing here and there.

He landed a job with the U.S. Consulate in the border city of Agua Prieta, Mexico. After five years, a senior official told him he was doing a great job but had no future in the Foreign Service—he had a Latino name and no Ivy League education. Castro quit and moved to Tucson.

A law school dean at the University of Arizona told Castro he wouldn't be accepted because Castro couldn't afford to quit a job teaching Spanish. Besides, the dean said, Latino students didn't do well in law school.

Undeterred, Castro went to the university president, who convinced the dean to give Castro an opportunity to prove himself. He excelled and went on to be elected the first Latino county attorney and later the first Latino judge in Pima County Superior Court.

"One of the finest men I ever knew," former Gov. Rose Mofford, a fellow Democrat, said of Castro during a 2010 interview with the AP.

Born in Cananea, Mexico, in 1916, some 50 miles south of Arizona, Castro grew up in Arizona and graduated from Douglas High School. He was the second-youngest in a family with 12 children—11 boys and one girl. His father was a union leader forced out of Mexico for organizing a strike at the mine in Cananea.

His father died when Castro was 12, and his mother became a midwife to feed the family. She delivered babies for the Mexican families around Douglas in exchange for flower, corn, beans, and other staples.

Education was the best way out, Castro determined.

He went on to serve as U.S. ambassador to three Latin American countries under three U.S. presidents. Lyndon Johnson sent him to El Salvador, where Castro became known as "Yankee Castro" to differentiate him from the other Raúl Castro—the brother of Cuban dictator Fidel Castro.

Johnson later sent him to Bolivia, and he stayed for a short time under Richard Nixon before returning to Arizona and making the first of two bids for governor.

His statewide races were two of the closest gubernatorial elections in state history. He lost to Republican Jack Williams in 1970 by 1.5 percentage points.

He fared better four years later as the Republican Party was embroiled in the Watergate corruption scandal. Castro defeated Republican Russ Williams by less than 1 percentage point three months after Nixon resigned amid the Watergate controversy.

As an ambassador and judge, Castro was used to having unquestioned authority; he struggled to adjust to the checks and balances imposed on a governor, said Alfredo Gutiérrez, a Democrat and legislative leader while Castro was governor.

"It was a very difficult beginning for him," Gutiérrez said. "It was quite an adjustment."

Castro was governor for 2½ years before resigning when President Jimmy Carter appointed him ambassador to Argentina.

He told the AP he was proud of his work motivating Latinos to vote, many of them for the first time despite deep nerves.

"The thing that bothered me the most when I resigned as governor, the Hispanic community felt that I had betrayed them, because they worked so hard to get me elected," he reminisced decades later. "I had to convince them and persuade them that being an American ambassador was just as important as being a governor. I had more authority."

Castro spent his waning years living in Nogales and talking to students around the state, motivating them to work hard and chase lofty dreams.

More whites than blacks, Latinos approve police striking men

By JESSE J. HOLLAND, Associated Press

WASHINGTON, DC, April 3, 2015 (AP): Whites in the United States approve of police officers hitting people in far greater numbers than blacks and Latinos do, at a time when the country is struggling to deal with police use of deadly force against men of color, according to a major US-American trend survey.

Seven of 10 whites polled, or 70 percent, said they can imagine a situation in which they would approve of a police officer striking an adult male citizen, according to the 2014 General Social Survey, a long-running measurement of trends in American opinions. When asked the same question—Are there any situations you can imagine in which you would approve of a policeman striking an adult male citizen?—42 percent of blacks and 38 percent of Latinos said they could.

These results come as Americans grapple with trust between law enforcement and minority communities after a series of incidents, including the deaths of Michael Brown in Ferguson, Missouri, and Eric Garner on Staten Island, New York, both black men who were unarmed when they were killed by white police officers.

Thousands of people protested in the streets last year after the deaths of 18-year-old Brown and 43-year-old Garner, who gasped "I can't breathe" as police arrested him for allegedly selling loose, untaxed cigarettes. But the survey shows the gap between whites, blacks and Hispanics long predates the recent incidents.

The poll results don't surprise experts on American attitudes toward police, who say experiences and history with law enforcement shape opinions about the use of violence by officers.

"Whites are significantly more likely to give police officers the benefit of the doubt, either because they have never had an altercation with a police officer or because they tend to see the police as allies in the fight against crime," said Ronald Weitzer, a George Washington University sociology professor who has studied race and policing in the U.S. and internationally.

However, blacks and Latinos "are more cautious on this issue because of their personal experiences and/or the historical treatment their groups have experienced at the hands of the police, which is only recapitulated in recent disputed killings," he said.

The General Social Survey is conducted by the independent research organization NORC at the University of Chicago. Because of its long-running and comprehensive set of questions about the piking, it is a highly regarded source of data about social trends. Numbers from the 2014 survey came out last month, and an analysis of its findings on attitudes toward police and the criminal justice system was conducted by The Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research and the General Social Survey.

Deep racial divides exist in other law enforcement areas as well:

- A larger number of blacks could approve police striking a murder suspect who is being questioned: 24 percent, compared to 18 percent of Latinos and 12 percent of whites.

- At more than half of whites, 69 percent, and half of Latinos approve of police hitting suspects trying to escape from custody but only 42 percent of blacks approve.

- Two-thirds, or 66 percent, of whites say they favor the death penalty for convicted murderers, while 44 percent of blacks and 48 percent of Latinos agree.

Associated Press News Survey Specialist Emily Swanson contributed to this report.

Alfonso Narvaez vies for Fourth District Council Seat

By Kevin Milliken, La Prensa Correspondent

Alfonso Narvaez may be young, but he's determined to make his hometown a better place.

The 23-year-old's firm belief that city government has forgotten the North Toledo neighborhoods where he grew up is the driving force behind yet another campaign for a city council seat.

Narvaez is a former high school valedictorian who has run for city council several times since he graduated in 2010. He made an unsuccessful bid for an at-large council seat in 2013 and recently was passed over for a temporary appointment to the District 4 council seat, which instead went to local boat repair shop owner Scott Ramsey.

Narvaez recently addressed "the number one question" people keep asking him on his candidacy Facebook page: "My answer is simple, residents deserve better leadership. Our neighborhoods deserve better representation."

He walked 14 miles that day through Toledo's District 4, meeting people who told him they've never seen a city council candidate before. Narvaez has lived his entire life in that city council district and started neighborhood cleanup projects a few years ago.

"The North End residents

often feel forgotten," Narvaez said during a recent radio interview. "We've cleaned up over 60 properties and last year was our biggest cleanup, covering an entire city block from Galena down to Chicago. It took two weeks to do."

The city's Fourth District is by far its most diverse—encompassing the Old West End, up-town business district, and parts of North Toledo. Some political heavy hitters have represented the district on city council in the past, using it as a stepping stone to higher office.

Edna Brown is now a state senator. Michael Ashford left the seat behind for the Ohio

House of Representatives. But a recent crisis moved District 4 rep and city council president Paula Hicks-Hudson up the political ladder, becoming mayor after the death of D. Michael Collins. All three officeholders are Democrats.

Ramsey, who is running in the May 5 runoff to keep the District 4 seat, is an independent.

Narvaez is treasurer of the Lucas County Republican Party, and has stated that, if elected, he will leave his part-time job at Home Depot to work full-time as a city councilman.

Other opponents in the May 5, 2015 special election include endorsed Democrat Yvonne Harper, 65, who is a retired bailiff at Toledo Municipal Court and a longtime activist within the Lucas County Democratic Party. Democrat Ruth Ashford, 57, is a retired Michigan state government employee and wife of Michael Ashford.

Harper and Ramsey have recently had to address state tax troubles. Both stated they are on repayment plans.

Even if Narvaez beats those three political heavyweights with a grass-roots, door-to-door campaign, he would hold the seat for six months. There's another election in November.

"It's mainly about getting the citizen support and that's what I've been doing until now. It's grass-roots. I'm getting a tremendous response," said Narvaez. "I think council's problem is they don't listen to the people. It's almost become a campaign slogan: we need to put neighborhoods first, we need to put seniors first, and we need to put families first."

If elected, Narvaez would be the youngest member of Toledo City Council. But it's precisely that youth that prompted the Toledo Blade to endorse his candidacy as soon as early voting opened earlier this month. He also is endorsed by the Lucas County GOP.

"I'm serious about it. I gave up two full-time job opportunities to work in the neighborhood—and those were two great opportunities with health benefits," he said. "I think neighborhoods should be first. I think the entire council has forgotten that. Good neighborhoods are the backbone to a good city."

But the N. Ontario St. must knock on enough doors to convince enough of the district's 35,000 registered voters that youth, not name recognition, should win the day. The strategy could very well backfire, because central city districts have turned out in extremely low numbers the past few elections—a sign of voter apathy.

"I'm going through these neighborhoods that nobody would walk. Four or five years ago, I was the only candidate to walk these poor neighborhoods," he recalled. "It's disappointing because some of these people have never seen a candidate before in their neighborhood. For me, it's about getting their voice out."

While Narvaez has made sure he's seen and they're heard, he'll continue what he's doing even if he's not elected May 5. There's always the November general election. Plus, he's kept busy with his duties as part of Blockwatch 220JK.

In fact, there's a neighborhood cleanup he's promoting on Sat., April 18—right in the middle of his campaign. According to a flyer he's distributing, neighbors will gather at the corner of Ash and Summit Streets. From 9 a.m. to noon, the group plans to walk the bike path that runs under the Veteran's Memorial Skyway bridge (I-280) picking up trash and debris.

That cleanup is a follow-up to recent alley cleanups, where Narvaez and his supporters got rid of tons of trash and debris, along with more than 140 old, abandoned tires.

"For us, it gives the neighborhood a sense of pride. We've also seen a drop in crime in some of the areas, because we stopped that alley traffic that goes through there," said Narvaez. "I noticed it going bad, but for the residents, it seemed like a normal thing. I just think they need a voice. They needed someone to stand up and that's what I did."

Candidate Narvaez's maternal grandparents immigrated from Mexico to Texas and then northward to Ohio. Narvaez graduated from Achieve Career Preparatory Academy; he has two sisters and two brothers.

The Early Voting Center is now open for those who wish to cast in-person, absentee ballots. But the location has changed to BTC Properties in downtown Toledo, 1946 North 13th Street, 1st Floor, Suite 122. The times to vote are Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Holi Toledo celebration rescheduled for April 15

Holi Toledo, the campus-wide event for the Hindu religious festival Holi—a celebration known for the color thrown into the air to celebrate the coming of spring—has been rescheduled to April 15, 2015.

The event will be 3 to 5 p.m. Wednesday, April 15 on the lawn of The University of Toledo's Memorial Field House. Students will have the chance to participate in the event by throwing color at each other.

"For us, the colors represent diversity—and in particular the diversity of religious and cultural perspectives at the heart of our Holi event," said Dr. Jeanine Diller, director of the UT Center for Religious Understanding.

Various booths, each hosted by a different student organization, will offer visitors a different colored powder. There will be powder blasts throughout the event where everyone will throw their color into the air at the same time, similar to the actual holiday in India.

It is recommended that attendees wear clothes that can be stained; while the color is water soluble, it is not guaranteed to wash out.

In addition to the color and booths, Indian music and dancers will be featured.

Diller said that last year's Holi Toledo was reportedly one of the most popular diversity events at the University to date.

"We understood from the diversity staff that this was one of the best diversity events UT has ever had, given the number of attendees and degree of mixing at the event," she said. "We also heard that international students felt very at home and welcomed at UT as a result of this event—a result I hadn't predicted. And there were some meaningful exchanges going on at the tables; one person told me they talked for over a half hour with someone who had a different perspective on religion."

With more than 400 people in attendance last year, Diller said she expects this year's event to be even bigger.

This event is sponsored by the UT Center for International Studies and Programs, UT Indian Students Cultural Association, UT Center for Religious Understanding, UT Office of Student Involvement, UT Office of Equity and Diversity, Toledo Community Foundation, and the President's Lecture Series on Diversity.

CPL welcomes Trisha Meili April 18

Cleveland Public Library's (CPL) Writers & Readers Series of Hope continues with Trisha Meili, author of I am the Central Park Jogger: a Story of Hope and Possibility on Saturday, April 18, 2015 at 2:00 p.m. in the Louis Stokes Wing Auditorium on East 6th Street and Superior Avenue.

"It is always our goal to bring authors and speakers to our patrons to inspire and leave patrons with something to think about and discuss," said Felton Thomas, director of CPL. "Trisha's story of recovery and survival is extraordinary."

In the spring of 1989, Trisha Meili, a 28-year-old investment banker, was found raped and bludgeoned in the Central Park mud. For years, she was simply known to the world as the Central Park Jogger. Five young African American and Hispanic men were wrongly convicted and served full sentences for her assault and rape before a convicted rapist serving a life sentence confessed and was proven to be the assailant.

Because of the nature of her injuries, Trisha does not remember the attack. Her incredible story of survival, recovery, and resilience are detailed in her best-selling memoir.

This event is free and open to the public. Seating is available on a first-come, first-served basis. Books will be available for purchase from A Cultural Exchange, and a book signing will follow the program. For more information, visit cpl.org.

estadounidenses que visitan bajo una de las 12 categorías aprobadas por el gobierno de Estados Unidos para efectuar viajes legales, las cuales van desde investigaciones profesionales hasta actividades religiosas.

Aunque prácticamente todos los viajes desde Estados Unidos a Cuba requerían anteriormente permisos individuales emitidos por el Departamento del Tesoro federal, los cambios ordenados en enero lo transforman en un sistema en el que el gobierno confía en la buena fe del público, ya que los turistas sólo llenan una forma en la que afirman que su viaje a la isla es por uno de los propósitos que sí están autorizados.

Un gran inconveniente del negocio privado cubano de alojamiento ha sido la dificultad de rentar desde el extranjero en una isla con una de las tasas más bajas de penetración de internet en el mundo y un sistema telefónico con fallas constantes. Aunque decenas de cibercafés tales como TripAdvisor tienen listas de lugares para hospedarse, la mayoría sólo proporcionan números telefónicos o direcciones de correo electrónico de los propietarios, en lugar de las ágiles contrataciones en línea y reservaciones garantizadas que Airbnb ofrecerá, como ya lo hace en más de 190 países.

"Nuestro plan es hacerlo sustancialmente más fácil", dijo Kuehne.

Aunque eso puede aplicarse a los viajeros, los propietarios aún tienen que hacer frente a la falta de acceso a internet en toda la isla. La mayoría tendrán que recurrir a centros de cómputo operados por el Estado, los cuales son caros, o a vestíbulos de hoteles con el fin de verificar reservaciones.

Y como gran parte del

sistema bancario internacional está fuera del alcance de los cubanos debido a las sanciones de Estados Unidos, los propietarios dependerán de amigos o de socios para recibir pagos de Airbnb en cuentas bancarias no estadounidenses.

Collin Laverty, propietario de Cuba Educational Travel, una de las firmas más grandes que organizan excursiones turísticas a Cuba, dijo que los dueños de viviendas ya han estado invirtiendo en comodidades tales como aire acondicionado central y mayor presión del agua con el fin de poder cobrar bastante más que 25 dólares la noche por los servicios básicos.

"Uno está empezando a ver sitios que pueden competir con hoteles de tres y cuatro estrellas", señaló.

Airbnb to Cuba in major US business expansion months, mostly by non-U.S. travelers, and many hotels are fully booked, particularly the few able to offer service close to international standards.

"Airbnb's momentous expansion into Cuba represents the first move by a major American company to fully seize the opportunities presented by both our new Cuba policy and the island's burgeoning entrepreneurial sector," said Ric Herrero, executive director of CubaNow, a Cuban-American group that lobbies for closer ties between the two countries.

For the time being, non-U.S. travelers will not be able to use Airbnb.

Because of continuing restrictions under the U.S. embargo, the company's Cuba listing will only be available to U.S. travelers visiting under one of 12 U.S.-government approved categories of legal travel, ranging from professional research to religious activities.

While virtually all U.S. travel to Cuba previously required individual licenses from the U.S. Treasury Department, the January changes essentially shift it to an honor system by allowing travelers to fill out a form asserting they are going for one of the approved purposes.

A major drawback for the Cuban private lodging business has been the difficulty of renting from overseas on an island with one of the world's lower rates of Internet penetration and a constantly malfunctioning phone system. While dozens of websites such as TripAdvisor have listings for lodgings, most only provide phone numbers or email addresses for owners instead of the quick online booking and guaranteed reservations that Airbnb will offer, as it does in more than 190 countries.

"Our plan is to make it substantially easier," Kuehne said.

While that sentiment holds for travelers, owners still have to grapple with the lack of access to the Internet across the island. Most will have to turn to pricey state-run Internet centers or hotel lobbies to check on reservations. And with much of the international banking system off-limits to Cubans due to U.S. sanctions, owners will depend on friends or business associates to receive payments from Airbnb in non-U.S. bank accounts.

Collin Laverty, owner of Cuba Educational Travel, one of the largest firms organizing group tours to Cuba, said home owners have already been investing in amenities such as central air conditioning and improved water pressure in order to be able to charge far more than $25 a night for basic service.

"You're starting to see places that can compete with three- and four-star hotels," Laverty said.

Bradley Klapper in Washington contributed to this report.

Maduro : EEUU tiene que pedir perdón a Panamá por invasión

Por JUAN ZAMORANO, Associated Press

PANAMA, 10 IV 15 (AP): El presidente venezolano Nicolás Maduro no solo buscará entregar a su colega de Estados Unidos Barack Obama una copiosa lista con millones de firmas de ciudadanos de su país y del mundo que exigen se elimine la declaración de que la nación petrolera es una amenaza a la seguridad de la potencia norteamericana.

El viernes, aceptó otra encomienda "con el alma" poco después de arribar a suelo panameño para la Cumbre de las Américas: se comprometió a pedido de familiares de los muertos en la invasión de Estados Unidos a Panamá a entregarle una carta a Obama en la que exhortan al mandatario a que pida perdón a la nación centroamericana y repare económicamente a los afectados.

"Me comprometo con el alma que lo voy a hacer", respondió Maduro a la presidenta de la asociación de familiares y de amigos de las víctimas de la invasión del 20 de diciembre de 1989, Trinidad Ayola.

Maduro fue más allá, al anunciar que el sábado en un encuentro con sus colegas de la Alianza Bolivariana para los Pueblos de Nuestra América (ALBA), paralelo a la Cumbre de las Américas, propondrá la posibilidad de enviar misiones humanitarias para asistir a la gente de El Chorrillo. Además, pedirá la integración de Panamá a Petrocaribe, una alianza petrolera.

El acto estuvo posiblemente bien pensado para conseguir créditos a la causa de Maduro en momentos en que se han recrudecido las tensiones con Washington. Muchos de los varios centenares de manifestantes en el acto eran simpatizantes venezolanos, que entregaban hojas en que se leía en español e inglés la frase "Obama deroga el decreto ya", en alusión a la declaración de que el país sudamericano representa una amenaza.

Poco antes de que hablase en el acto, algunos estudiantes de la Universidad de Panamá (pública) le entregaron a Maduro una caja con firmas de solidaridad a su gobierno. A un costado, un grupo de personas con gorras e indumentarias de Venezuela mostró en lo alto una pancarta grande en que se leía "Obama, Panamá pide justicia por las víctimas de la invasión".

Poco antes de que llegase Maduro a Panamá, Obama visitó una de las esclusas del Canal de Panamá situada al norte de la capital. Estados Unidos construyó la vía interoceánica y la operó entre 1914 y 1999. El presidente estadounidense se reunió después con el gobernante panameño Juan Carlos Varela.

La Casa Blanca ha dicho que no tratará su crisis con Venezuela en el marco de la cumbre. Pero Caracas sí viene con intenciones de poner el asunto de las sanciones y la declaratoria estadounidense en la mesa.

"Vinimos cargados de optimismo en todos los campos de batalla, inclusive en la mesa diplomática", dijo en el acto el embajador de Venezuela ante la OEA Roy Chaderton.

Un día antes del viaje de Maduro, un grupo de 25 ex presidentes de España y América Latina exigieron la libertad de los presos políticos y la celebración de elecciones parlamentarias libres este año en Venezuela como medidas para buscar una salida a la crisis política en esa nación.

La activista Ayola, cuyo esposo un militar que murió por los bombardeos estadounidenses, agradeció a Maduro por ser el primer presidente del extranjero que visita el barrio y se solidariza con los familiares que perdieron a seres queridos y amigos en la invasión. El pasado 20 de diciembre, cuando se celebraron los primeros 25 años de esa acción, Varela se convirtió en el primer líder panameño en asistir a los actos en recordación de los caídos en un cementerio donde descansan en fosas comunes.

"He venido a este barrio porque para nosotros, la juventud latinoamericana, fue muy doloroso ver se masacraba la población bolivariana de Panamá, en 1989. "Son imágenes que más nunca deben verse", expresó en medio de gritos de "Maduro, Maduro, al yanqui dale duro".

"Nos hemos sentido muy tristes. Este es un señor (Maduro) que no es muy querido en su patria, pero ha tenido un gesto con nuestros compatriotas muertos", dijo Olga Cárdenas, de 61 años y activista del comité. "Le vamos a decir que mire esta triste experiencia y que ojalá que no ocurra eso en su país, que haga puentes para la paz".

De acuerdo con cifras oficiales, 314 soldados y 200 civiles panameños fallecieron en la acción del 20 de diciembre, mientras que por el lado estadounidense se contabilizó la baja de 200 militares. Organismos de derechos humanos locales estiman que la cifra de muertos fue de más de un millar, aunque no pudo comprobarlo.

La invasión, que comenzó con el bombardeo de El Chorrillo, en ese entonces un barrio de casas de madera vieja, expulsó del poder al dictador Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Buena parte de las destartadas casas consumidas por el fuego fueron reemplazadas posteriormente por edificios de concreto multifamiliares.

Los homicidios producto de grupos pandilleros que se dedican a la venta de drogas siguen golpeando a ese barrio.

Se abre Cumbre de las Américas

Por JUAN ZAMORANO y ANDREA RODRIGUEZ, Associated Press

PANAMA, 11 IV 15 (AP): Cumbre de las Américas abre con rechazo a las sanciones "unilaterales" de Estados Unidos a Venezuela, la bienvenida Cuba y expresiones de satisfacción al avance de las negociaciones de paz en Colombia.

Las críticas a Estados Unidos no estuvieron ausentes, aunque los pasos históricos dados por Washington y La Habana para restablecer sus relaciones diplomáticas recibieron el respaldo casi contundente.

La séptima Cumbre de las Américas propuso esta vez que los líderes que alcancen compromisos serios para llevar la bonanza alcanzada en las últimas décadas a los sectores más vulnerables de la región, en que alrededor de 167 millones de personas viven en la pobreza, según organismos de las Naciones Unidas.

El grupo de líderes convergió en coincidencias sobre el tema de la desigualdad, pero algunos aprovecharon para cuestionar a Estados Unidos, como la brasileña Dilma Rousseff que criticó las sanciones impuestas recientemente por Washington a Venezuela y la declaratoria de que el país petrolero representa una amenaza a la seguridad de la poderosa nación nortea.

"Estas medidas unilaterales son contraproducentes", expresó la mandataria, al tiempo en que mencionó los esfuerzos de la Unión de Naciones Suramericanas para impulsar el diálogo entre el gobierno y la oposición en Venezuela.

El presidente mexicano Enrique Peña Nieto resaltó la decisión de Estados Unidos y Cuba de restablecer sus relaciones y las implicaciones que ello tendrá en la región.

"Los líderes de ambas naciones le han recordado al mundo que la apertura al diálogo está cargado de futuro y posibilidades", expuso.

"También quiero aquí expresar el reconocimiento al proceso de paz que está viviendo Colombia".

El presidente ecuatoriano Rafael Correa dijo, empero, que "nuestra alegría no puede ser completa. Queda el bloqueo (estadounidense contra Cuba) y la devolución de (la base) de Guantánamo". Obama y Castro también intervenían en la primera sesión.

Red Light Camera Amnesty Program

Since the City of Toledo began its civil photo-enforcement program more than $21 million in penalties has not been collected. Over $14 million remains delinquent from violations issued over the past 5 years. To address these delinquencies, the City will begin to file lawsuits to collect unpaid violations.

Beginning April 7th and ending June 7th, the City is instituting an amnesty program that will allow persons with unpaid violations to resolve the violation at a reduced amount. Under the Amnesty Program if a violator pays two-thirds (2/3) of the delinquent amount, the remaining balance will be forgiven.

Collections from the Amnesty program will be handled by the Law Offices of Scheer, Green, and Burke, CO. L.P.A. The program will be available to any person with one or more delinquent violations provided that person has not already been named in a collection lawsuit.

Failure to pay your delinquent tickets before the June 7th, 2015 deadline will result in the full amount of the delinquent tickets.

Beginning on April 7th, 2015 if you have any questions about the amnesty program, or the amount you owe, call the Law Offices of Scheer, Green, and Burke, CO. L.P.A. at 419-243-2283.
